MINER — The city council was forced to end a routine meeting rather abruptly last night when three of the council members were called to fight a fire at the Robert Freeman house on Jarvis St.

The fire was quickly brought under control and damage was confined to the interior of the front of the house.

No ordinances were passed at the council meeting. The council did ask for clarification on a letter from the federal price board that appeared to say that the city did not have to heed price guidelines on a proposed rate increase. The council learned that Waters and Associates will soon begin checking grades for the proposed sanitary sewer system.

A rate decrease for subscribers to the city Water and Light Co. is now in effect, according to Dick Inman, director of city utilities.

Mild Earthquake In Bootheel

NEW MADRID, Mo. (AP) — A tremor described as a "relatively mild earthquake" shook parts of southeast Missouri where the New Madrid fault is located shortly before midnight Monday.

There were no immediate reports of damage.

The St. Louis University seismograph detected the quake at 11:43 p.m. Seismologist James Zolloweg said the tremor registered 3.7 on the Richter seale cand occurred about 150 miles from St. Louis.

A New Madrid police spokesman said he heard a radio report about a "shake" at Wardell, about 20 miles to the southwest in northern Pemiscot County.

But Wardell pollce Chief Gene Young said he had no such reports.

A conservation agent reported from his home in Kennett, about 40 miles southwest of New Madrid, that he felt the tremor.

The Missouri Highway Patrol at Poplar Bluff said some residents of that city reported feeling a tremor.

Zolloweg said major quakes usually register above 8 on the Richter scale and Monday night's tremor was "relatively mild."

Committee Public Vote Okayed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Senate today adopted, 28-1, a rule change requiring a public record of the voting of committee members on bills and resolutions.

The proposed rule now goes back to the House for consideration of a Senate change specifying that each committee member's vote must be shown as yes or no, if he voted.

Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin, D-Hornersville, was the only member to vote againnst the public record.

There was no discussion after Sen. William J. Cason, D-Clinton, told the Senate he thought such a rule would help the public and help the legislature as well. He said it should foster additional public trust in the legislature.

For years both the House and Senate have recorded in committee only the total vote for or against legislation and the Supreme Court has held that is valid.

But there has been growing concern on the part of some legislative leaders that the people have a right to a full record of how their representatives and senators vote.

Traffic Signals To Come

C. A. LAWRENCE, survey and planning engineer, seated in the back, Bob Sfreddo, district chief designer, seated in the front right are both from the Sikeston office and Jim D. Plumb, signal design engineer from Jefferson City are watching the intersection of Pine and East Malone.

Bob Sfreddo, district chief designer from the Sikeston office of the Highway Department said that resurfacing of Highway 62 from Main east to Route AA and signal - lighting of the intersection at Pine and Highway 62 are in a five year highway program.

Right-of-way will be purchased in the future so expansion of the Pine and Highway 62 intersection for left turn lanes can be made possible.

The resurfacing will start at Main Street near the Shoe factory and continue down East Malone through Miner to Route AA. The intersection to get signal lights is located at Pine and East Malone near Barketts Big Star and the Mid-Towner Shopping Villiage.

Billboard Costs Shared

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth held today the state Highway Commission may not use highway funds to cover the cost of administering Missouri's billboard law.

That would include administration of the permit program or matching federal funds to tear down illegal signs.

The attorney general, basing his opinion on the present state law, said money to administer the billboard program thus would have to come from appropriations by the legislature from the state's general revenue fund.

The opinion was issued at the request of Rep. Thomas D. Graham, D-Jefferson City.

Under a new and stricter billboard law ready for passage in the Senate to conform with federal requirements, the federal government would provide 75 per cent of the cost of removing illegal signs and compensating their owners, with the state supplying the rest.

Debate in the Senate Tuesday indicated the money would have to come from billboard permit fees plus general revenue appropriations.

In another opinion, Danforth advised State Rep. R. J. King, R-Clayton, that the state Board of Mediation can offer its services in settling a dispute involving a utility that operates in interstate commerce.

The opinion said "the authority of the state board is not foreclosed by reason of the federal statutes, even though the dispute in question affects interstate commerce, unless and until federal mediation and conciliation services assumes jurisdiction..."

King and the late Rep. Murray Thompson were co-sponsors in 1947 of the bill that set up the state Mediation Board.

Groundhog Day Winter-Summer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Today is Groundhog Day and tradition has it that when the groundhog comes out of hibernation on Feb. 2 and sees his shadow, he goes back to bed and winter will hang on another six weeks.

But if he doesn't see a shadow, he stays topside as aharbinger of an early spring.

If the groundhog at the Yalem Children's Zoo in St. Louis behaves like he did in a dry run Tuesday, nothing will be decided—at least for the St. Louis area.

The little critter poked his head out of his burrow under a cloudy sky—fine weather for not seeing shadows, then whirled and went underground again.

Forecasters at the National Weather Service office in St. Louis said they don't put much stock in groundhog weather predictions.

"For one thing," a weatherman said, "we don't know which particular groundhog is the determining influence. It certainly would have to be one with authority over a wide area to have any significant effect on wide-ranging weather patterns."

Student Aid Bill Approved

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Senate Higher Education Committee Tuesday approved a bill to provide up to $35 million next year for aid to needy college students in both private and state-supported schools.

The measure carries specific language intended to guard against use of the funds to support, directly or indirectly, any religion.

It would provide up to $900 a year to students, depending on their financial situation and tuition charged by the school of their choice.

Private schools are backing the bill, contending they cannot compete for student enrollment with state-supported colleges and universities where tuition, fees and boarding costs are much lower.

They said the state will save money in the long run because it would cut down on the need for expanding public institutions.

A similar bill died last year for lack of funds to finance it.

The burglar was discovered about 3 a.m., when police found the back door to the store open. When the investigating officer radioed for assistance, the thief tossed the tv through the front door and escaped. Police said that nothing appeared missing from the store.

In other robberies, a stereo tape player was reported stolen about 6:30 p.m. yesterday from a car owned by Bill Hoskins while it was parked at his home at 134 N. West St.

Mike Fansler of Gun and Smoke, Kingsway Plaza, reported that someone had stolen an $8 knife about 4:19 p.m.

Only Low Numbers Might Go

Lottery Held

WASHINGTON (AP) — The draft lottery for two million men turning 19 this year began today with No. 29 being assigned to those born Sept. 26, 1953.

The second draw of capsules from two plexiglass drums in this fourth draft lottery, perhaps the last in the Vietnam war era that will actually draft men, mated No. 319 to men born Oct. 11, 1953.

Nov. 24 was drawn from a red capsule and No. 180 from a blue capsule on the third match of a ceremony in the Commerce Department auditorium that is expected to last about two hours.

The lottery decides the sequence of the call to military service in 1973, at least until July 1 of the year when the current draft authority expires. President Nixon has pledged to achieve a zero draft by then and make another extension of the draft unnecessary.

Only those with very low numbers are expected to be called. The callup is expected to be far under the lottery No. 125 reached in 1971.

Draft Director Curtis W. Tarr, in remarks prepared to open the ceremonies in the Commerce Department auditorium, said:

"It is a continuing goal of President Nixon to establish an all-volunteer armed force, and thus to end reliance on the draft, by mid-1973. We do not know as yet what the draft call will be in 1973.

"Nor do we know as yet what the call will be for the remainder of 1972, but we do expect calls to be lower than they have been in recent years."

Tarr traced the short history of the draft lottery, starting in 1969, saying "both the U.S. military situation and Selective Service have changed a great deal.

"The manpower requirements of the armed services have decreased considerably, and there has been a corresponding lowering of the number of men inducted each year."

Tarr said the goal of all the changes in the draft "has been to make the draft, for as long as is necessary, as fair and equitable as possible to all young men."

End Embargoed Matter.

For today's drawing the birthdates were placed in big red capsules and the numbers in blue ones. Each color group then went into giant plexiglass drums in a scrambled sequence. The drums were rotated to mix the capsules even further.

Four young men and two women—three whites and three blacks—were chosen to draw the capsules out. They are members of state Selective Service Youth Advisory Commissions in Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

The selection plan called for a red and blue capsule to be pulled from the drums simultaneously and handed to two announcers to open them and read the papers—first the birthdate, then the number of call.

Every eligible man will keep the number assigned to his birthdate for as long as he is exposed to possible selection. Those in previous lotteries will retain their numbers until they pass from the ranks of the eligible.

In New Madrid County Court

Restraining Orders

NEW MADRID — Temporary restraining orders have been issued by Judge William L. Ragland on petitions filed in circuit court to resolve union disputes on two large constructions jobs in New Madrid county.

At the power plant construction in St. Jude Industrail Park south of here, Local 27, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Ship Builders, Blacksmiths, Forgers and Helpers of America, and Local 562, United Association of Journeymen and Apprentices of the Plumbing and Pipefitting Industry of the United States and Canada are involved in a work assignment dispute.

Boilermakers at the power plant construction charge they had been prevented from performing their work assignments given to them by their employer, Babcock and Wilcox, by members and representatives of the Pipefitters union, who had threatened to use physical force and violence to do bodily harm if the Boilermakers proceed with the assignment.

An affidavit by the Boilermaker job steward filed with a petition seeking the restraining order states that when he was notified by the assistant area superintendent and the project director of Babcock and Wilcox that Boilermakers Local 27 had been given the work assignment to weld burner seals to the cyclone, he was told he should hold up starting the work because there could be trouble. The affidavit states the Pipefitters union representatives were contacted to see if they were aware of the work assignment. He was told by the representatives they were not, and until they were notified by Ed Steska, local 562 business manager, the assignment didn't mean a thing. When Local 562 representatives were asked if there would be trouble if the Boilermakers started the assignment, the affidavit charges the Pipefitters representatives said they would have to stop them.

A cyclone is a firing chamber about ten feet in diameter, and the burner ignites fuel in the cyclone. The burner is about three feet in diameter and is bolted and seal-welded to the cyclone.

Only Low Numbers Might Go Lottery Held

WASHINGTON (AP) — The draft lottery for two million men turning 19 this year began today with No. 29 being assigned to those born Sept. 26, 1953.

The second draw of capsules from two plexiglass drums in this fourth draft lottery, perhaps the last in the Vietnam war era that will actually draft men, mated No. 319 to men born Oct. 11, 1953.

Nov. 24 was drawn from a red capsule and No. 180 from a blue capsule on the third match of a ceremony in the Commerce Department auditorium that is expected to last about two hours.

The lottery decides the sequence of the call to military service in 1973, at least until July 1 of the year when the current draft authority expires. President Nixon has pledged to achieve a zero draft by then and make another extension of the draft unnecessary.

Only those with very low numbers are expected to be called. The callup is expected to be far under the lottery No. 125 reached in 1971.

Draft Director Curtis W. Tarr, in remarks prepared to open the ceremonies in the Commerce Department auditorium, said:

"It is a continuing goal of President Nixon to establish an all-volunteer armed force, and thus to end reliance on the draft, by mid-1973. We do not know as yet what the draft call will be in 1973.

"Nor do we know as yet what the call will be for the remainder of 1972, but we do expect calls to be lower than they have been in recent years."

Tarr traced the short history of the draft lottery, starting in 1969, saying "both the U.S. military situation and Selective Service have changed a great deal.

"The manpower requirements of the armed services have decreased considerably, and there has been a corresponding lowering of the number of men inducted each year."

Tarr said the goal of all the changes in the draft "has been to make the draft, for as long as is necessary, as fair and equitable as possible to all young men."

End Embargoed Matter.

For today's drawing the birthdates were placed in big red capsules and the numbers in blue ones. Each color group then went into giant plexiglass drums in a scrambled sequence. The drums were rotated to mix the capsules even further.

Four young men and two women—three whites and three blacks—were chosen to draw the capsules out. They are members of state Selective Service Youth Advisory Commissions in Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

The selection plan called for a red and blue capsule to be pulled from the drums simultaneously and handed to two announcers to open them and read the papers—first the birthdate, then the number of call.

Every eligible man will keep the number assigned to his birthdate for as long as he is exposed to possible selection. Those in previous lotteries will retain their numbers until they pass from the ranks of the eligible.

In New Madrid County Court Restraining Orders

NEW MADRID — Temporary restraining orders have been issued by Judge William L. Ragland on petitions filed in circuit court to resolve union disputes on two large constructions jobs in New Madrid county.

At the power plant construction in St. Jude Industrail Park south of here, Local 27, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Ship Builders, Blacksmiths, Forgers and Helpers of America, and Local 562, United Association of Journeymen and Apprentices of the Plumbing and Pipefitting Industry of the United States and Canada are involved in a work assignment dispute.

The second union dispute is between Universal Tank and Iron Work, Inc., whose employes are members of International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Ship Builders, Blacksmiths, Forgers and Helpers, National Transient Member, 570, and Hoisting Engineers, Local 513.

Monday has been set in each case for the Pipefitters representatives and Hoisting Engineers representative to appear to show cause why the restaining order against them should not be made permanent.

Boilermakers at the power plant construction charge they had been prevented from performing their work assignments given to them by their employer, Babcock and Wilcox, by members and representatives of the Pipefitters union, who had threatened to use physical force and violence to do bodily harm if the Boilermakers proceed with the assignment.

An affidavit by the Boilermaker job steward filed with a petition seeking the restraining order states that when he was notified by the assistant area superintendent and the project director of Babcock and Wilcox that Boilermakers Local 27 had been given the work assignment to weld burner seals to the cyclone, he was told he should hold up starting the work because there could be trouble. The affidavit states the Pipefitters union representatives were contacted to see if they were aware of the work assignment. He was told by the representatives they were not, and until they were notified by Ed Steska, local 562 business manager, the assignment didn't mean a thing. When Local 562 representatives were asked if there would be trouble if the Boilermakers started the assignment, the affidavit charges the Pipefitters representatives said they would have to stop them.

A cyclone is a firing chamber about ten feet in diameter, and the burner ignites fuel in the cyclone. The burner is about three feet in diameter and is bolted and seal-welded to the cyclone.

OUR DRUG SUBCULTURE

The national school public relations association reports that there is stark evidence of a drug subculture that has taken root in America and found fertile breeding grounds in the schools.

President Nixon's "deliberately cautious" estimate is that 16 per cent of the nation's 18 million high school students are experimenting with marijuana. Most doctors, educators and drug authorities believe the figure is closer to 25 or 35 per cent.

The public relations association report says: "This means that up to 6 million students are taking drugs illegally." It added that some 50,000 school children are addicted hopelessly on herion.

The survey found high rates of drug abuse in big cities. It reported that 40 per cent of San Francisco's junior and senior high school students were experimenting with drugs. The figure was 22 per cent for Houston.

Some teachers may use drugs themselves. It has been suggested that high school students and teachers undergo tests to spot drug users. Drug abuse reflects the failure of adults to enforce discipline in their homes, their schools and their cities.

Russell Townsley writes that raising money isn't easy. Recently, the president of McPherson college resigned. Buried in the platitudes which accompany announcements of such a delicate nature was the impression that the president's skills as an administrator were not as important to trustees as was the ability to wring money from alumni and friends of the college.

The conflict between the need for management and the need for money is not limited to colleges. It is found in privately- endowed hospitals, churches, museums, child-care centers, even in community programs.

Yet we are concerned about the procession of projects -- local, state and national -- which the public is asked to underwrite. We can't blame those who hold back until they find assurance that their donations will be properly used.

WOMEN AND POLITICS

The women's liberation movement is buckling down to the realities of election - year politics. The new breed of woman wants a stronger voice in the power centers of government. To get it, she is not above using some of the tactics of the male "sexist" politician who now runs the show. The National Women's political Caucus, for example, is going to stage a fund-raising event on Thursday, Feb. 3, in Washington -- not a $100-a-plate dinner but a $25-a-person "champagne benefit." To entertain the paying guests, the sponsors promise a "Right-on" program featuring the humorist, Art Buchwald, as master of ceremonies; the women's lib "glamor girl", Gloria Steinem; New York City's outspoken congresswoman Bella Abzug and other celebrities. Funds will be used to finance Caucus activities.

That the women mean business is indicated by the rapid growth of a national network of state and local women's political caucuses. All are dedicated to getting out the women's vote, pushing forward potential women candidates, and electing candidates who favor the women's platform. Thirty state caucuses have gone into action since the national caucus was formed last July, and women's groups are working to form more in other states. A prime goal of the state caucuses is to gain influence over the selection of delegates to the presidential conventions of both major parties.

Women are crossing party lines and setting aside liberal - conservative differences to unite on this new political enterprise. Perhaps the best indication of the political clout of the women is that nearly all of the Democratic hopefuls for the presidential nomination and their wives -- as well as wives of a number of top officials in the Nixon administration – are listed as "bi-partisan Friends of the Benefit."

THE SUCCESS FACTOR

An inquiry was sent by the Carnegie Foundation to a group of successful engineers. They were asked this question:

"In determining probably success or failure in your profession, what factors do you count most important?"

Some 1,500 replies were received. To the surprise of everyone, the technical training factor was voted relatively unimportant. What was given first place was character. Character received seven times as many votes.

A second inquiry was sent to members of four engineering societies. Six groups of qualities were listed: character, judgment, understanding of men, knowledge of life, and technical skill.

GOT A HEADACHE?

Aspirin was first made in 1853, by a German chemist, von Gerhardt. But, its value as a medicine was not discovered until 46 years later, in 1899. According to the experts, Americans consume a column of aspirin higher than the Empire State Building every three minutes around the clock. This means that approximately 16 billion aspirins or 8,000 tons of this pain-easing, fever-lowering medicine are taken each year. And with good reason. Aspirin really works, and is one of the safest medicines in the world!

FREEDOM PAYS

Only five states doubled their per capita income between the years 1960 and 1970.

During the same period, 19 states created 1,362,000 jobs while the 31 others managed to come up with 1,259,000.

And those same 19 states lost only 9,124,000 man days due to strike action against 57,268,000 in the 31 others.

What the states with those favorable economic indicators had in common was this: Each has a Right to Work law that guarantees the essential freedom to workers to join or not to join and pay dues to a union.

That, of course, is the basic purpose of such laws barring all forms of compulsory unionism. But one of the "side effects" of this protected freedom for the working man is even-handed treatment of management and unions alike.

This ultimately provides a climate that attracts new industry and benefits everybody.

Reports of the U. S. Department of Labor and the U. S. Department of Commerce show this conclusively, for the 19 Right to Work states continue to lead the nation in rate of economic growth.

.... Between 1960 and 1970 the Right to Work states created more jobs than the other 31 combined. In absolute figures this amounted to 1,362,000 jobs as opposed to 1,259,000 in states permitting compulsory unionism.; in terms of percentages, this amounted to a 43.1% gain as opposed to 26.9%.

.... Expenditures for new plants and equipment for the 1960-1968 period skyrocketed by 137.2% in Right to Work states as opposed to 94.7% in non-Right to Work states.

.... Per capita personal income between 1960 and 1970 shot up 84.2% in Right to Work states; comparable figures for non-Right to Work states was 73.7%.

.... There was less unemployment in Right to Work states in 1970 than in compulsory unionism states. Figures were 4.2% in voluntary unionism states vs. 5.1% in states permitting compulsory unionism.

.... In states without Right to Work laws, much more time (.41% of working time in those states as opposed to .26% in Right to Work states) was lost through work stoppages due to strike action. The number of man days lost in 1970 in non-Right to Work states totaled 57,268,000; in Right to Work states, 9,124,000.

The figures clearly show that a climate of freedom helps nurture the economy, proving a boon to everybody — workers, investors and the public.

More over, it eliminates the crisis- plagued atmosphere accompanying demands by union professionals for forced unionism. As AFL-CIO President George Meany himself admits, strikes over compulsory unionism are a "frequent cause of industrial strife."

The issue is basically one of freedom for the working man — and the figures provide clear proof that the economy flourishes under that freedom and withers under compulsion.

WHAT TAX RELIEF?

Whatever tax relief is obtained either at the local or national level will be more than wiped out by Social Security tax increases. A bill now before Congress would, as a bulletin of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce comments, mean an "oppressive tax burden."The bill provides for a five per cent across - the-board increase in benefits effective June, 1972. The bill also provides for automatic increases in benefits and in the amount of "exempt" annual earnings under the retirement test.

The Chamber bulletin reports too that the bill would mean "... an oppressive Social Security Medicare tax burden on workers and employers. In 1972, taxes on workers and employers would be increased $4.2 billion. The cumulative tax increase over the next six years would amount to $57 billion." Meanwhile, in the past 21 months, Congress has increased the social security benefits twice -- by over 25 per cent in the aggregate.

The future of social security and social security taxes is more than an economic question; it is a political question. Granting social se rity increases is an increasingly irresistible political vote-getting tactic. The accompanying tax increases will be played down as much as possible.

As for "tax relief," only the most naive will believe such a myth.

WAR PRISONERS HAVE RIGHTS TOO

U. S. servicemen fortunate enough to win their way back to freedom from North Vietnamese detention have affirmed that prisoners are often subjected to unspeakable abuses and torture.

Recent action of the American Red Cross to intensify efforts to open channels of communication and relief to U. S. servicemen being held as prisoners of war in North Vietnam is highlighted by the approval of a resolution adopted by representatives of 77 governments and 91 national Red Cross societies, urging that prisoners of war be given the benefits and protection of the Geneva Conventions. This means, as Sen. Fulbright of Arkansas observes: "Irrespective of the nature of the conflict which gives rise to his imprisonment a captor should be mindful, in the words of the Convention, that a prisoner is in the hands of a detaining power 'as a result of circumstances independent of his own will.' He should, as recited in the International Red Cross Conference resolution, be promptly identified; afforded an adequate diet and medical care; permitted to communicate with other prisoners and with the exterior; promptly repatriated if seriously sick or wounded; and at all times be protected from abuse or reprisals. And, as specifically prescribed in the Convention, a neutral intermediary such as the International Committee of the Red Cross should be afforded free access to prisoners of war and their places of detention."

FOREVER AN ART

Heavy emphasis has been placed on programs to attain an all=encompassing medical care system. The goal seems to be quantitative medicine. Progress is measured in numbers-- so many doctors, so many hospitals and other health care facilities for so many hundreds of millions of people. The trouble with such a system in the field of medicine is that no matter how many people there are, the population is made up of individuals, and no two individuals are alike.

Subjecting the individual to assembly-line medical care is something that the U. S. medical profession is dedicated to avoiding. It believes complete medical care must be measured in quality, as well as quantity. As the Dean of Pennsylvania State. Univ. College of Medicine points out: "The patient does not wish to be treated as a statistic from a group approach, but as an individual–a person. The practice of medicine has historically been considered an art. It rests more and more on a scientific base, but because of biologic variability, the data collected on an individual patient cannot meet scientific criteria; hence, the practice of medicine will forever remain an art. Practice can be looked upon as a highly confidential interpersonal relationship. The emphasis in the educational program should be on the individual..whether he be student, patient, or physician-teacher."

The U. S. system of government and of private enterprise, and the freedoms we enjoy under it, rest solidly on the premise that the individual is important. Nowhere is the individual more important than in the realm of health care. The American medical system is tailored to the American philosophy of individualism. A cardinal aim of national health care policies and programs should be to preserve, as well as to expand, the present system.

SIXTH GRADE CAPITALISM

A new kind of grading system has been adopted by a sixth grade Calif. school teacher. It is based on a point and incentive system that pays the student in imaginary dollars, for good work and fines him when he falls down on the job. The teacher says the system works:"... It has done away with grades. I substitute academic dollars."

At the beginning of the year, the instructor gives each pupil a $500 credit to start the semester. The nest egg expands or shrinks, according to the caliber of academic work produced by its owner. Students can build small empires. A superior student can acquire a firm that dispenses facts to those who were inattentive in class or didn't do homework. There are about a dozen other firms successful students can buy and operate. They also may earn academic dollars for helping slower students, for good work habits and for cooperation in class. Says the instructor: "You can't keep the kids at home. They come even when they're sick...The students are motivated to work."

When parents criticize the idea of bringing capitalism to the schools, the teacher answers, "But I'm teaching the American way of life..." What is wrong with capitalism? The imaginative California schoolteacher deserves praise. We need more like him.

POWER IN THE INDIAN OCEAN

The abbreviated war involving India and Pakistan brought U.S. naval forces in strength into the Indian Ocean where Russian fleet units had been prowling in a Soviet version of gunboat diplomacy. The Indian Ocean has become a new area of interest for Washington as the British navy pulled back into its shell and the Russians, making huge strides in naval strength, began to intrude with its missile cruisers. It is now obvious that the Soviets activity of recent months was aimed at impressing India.

When Pakistan and India locked horns in land combat, the U.S. sent its mightiest warship, the nuclear carrier Enterprise, into the Indian Ocean in a show of strength. Quickly the Russian cruisers, powerfully armed, maneuvered in the same ocean. It is possible that the brevity of the land fighting prevented a confrontation at sea.

Now the United States is improving its naval facilities in the area, including the port at Bahrein on the Persian Gulf. It is to be hoped that the nations of Asis are impressed by our show of strength. They, and the peoples of all nations, will be even more impressed if we start catching up on modern naval power. We need more cruisers and submarines armed to fight surface-to -surface and thus reduce the threat of the ever-expanding Russian navy. The Indian Ocean has become a critical area. But so are the Pacific and Atlantic, our traditional shields from aggressors. A revitalized navy and stepped up land missile program are vital to our defense against the powerful communist nations whose intentions have always been the domination of the freedom-loving peoples of the world of which we, the citizens of the United States, constitute a large part.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON -- Classified documents in our possession reveal, unhappily, that deception is still the official policy in Vietnam.

The raw facts about the Vietnam War go through a filtering and flavoring process, which can be ascribed partly to a natural desire to make American troops look as heroic as possible, partly to the Pentagon's determination to portray the war as the top brass want the world to see it.

A classified memo to all top U.S. officials in the pacification program, for example, bluntly tells them to be misleading at command briefings. These are special briefings for visiting newsmen and dignitaries. The memo, therefore, is an order to flavor the well of truth at its source.

Small wonder that Brig. Gen. James Herbert, a top U.S. deputy in the pacification program, ordered that "Overall security classification will be SECRET."

Dated September 8, 1971, the memo mentions the disaster-ridden programs for helping war victims and for persuading the Viet cong and North Vietnamese to defect. U.S. officials in charge of these programs are directed only to "submit material which reflects progress" for th briefings.

General Herbert notes the briefing program is aimed at creating a picture of "progress made in the Republic of Vietnam."

To carry out this aim, all pacification officials must "develop ten or twelve high impact indicators that say persuasively that much progress has been made; that our effort has not been a fruitless venture; that we have helped to establish conditions and build systems that at least give the Republic of Vietnam an opportunity to choose its future course of events.

"Final thought should be that a strong, broadly based military establishment has been created in RVN (South Vietnam) that will be difficult to destroy by military action....."

Our Vietnamese allies are even more blatant in faking success where none exists. A calssified U.S. translation of an order by the late Lt. Gen. Do Cao Tri explains all those slogans that visitors to Vietnam are shown, as evidence of pro-Saigon sentiment, in hamlets and along the roads.

Soldiers and civilians in his military region were ordered by Gen. Tri to "display national flags at every village/hamelt office and person's home. Paint national flag 20 x27 centimeters on ehouter walls of the homes.

"Draw as many of the folloiwng slogans as possible on the blank walls: 'To coalesce with the Communists is suicide,' 'We are determined not to concede any land to the Communists,' 'To Chieu Hoi (defect) is the only way to end the War and restore Peace.'

"Depending on the local situation, all utilization of leaflets, slogans and banners must be exploited to the fullest. These operations must be completed in one week.....Results should be reported to (TRI) and should include .....the number of villages and hamlets where flags were displayed, and the number of slogans, leaflets, and banners distributed at the localities."

This attitude of fakery and falsehood extends down to every level. For example, Americans have been repeatedly told about the increasing number of hamlets which are secure from Communist control.

A high U.S. pacification offial, Wilbur Wilson, tells in a confidential memo, dated August 19, 1971, how he cut two Viet Cong-controlled hamlets out of a district simply by gerrymandering the district Tammany-style.

"The District Chief has recommended that the boundaries of these two hamlets be charged," Wilson told his superiors. "I indicated to the District Senior Advisor that he could assure that this recommendation would be approved, and the August HRD (hamlet survey) should reflect no (Viet Cong-controlled.) hamlets."

Actually, the Viet Cong have been making inroads inplaces that were formerly free of Communists, even as the American people have been told the opposite.

For example, a classified U.S. study showed that by July 1971, 77 outposts had been overrun in the vast Fourth Military District, compared to 44 at the same time in 1970 and 67 for all of 1970.

Perhaps U.S. officials simply are sick of the truths in Vietnam, and would rather read soft, sweet lies. As a symptom of this, we can quote from a memo written to his aides by Richard Funkhouser, Pacification Head for a giant area north of Saigon.

"I plan to visit provinces and districts," he advised his deputies down the lines. Each division director, he said, should be prepared to give him three pieces of good news about programs that might possibly be used to show "accomplishments."

Helicopter Mystery -- The British have picked up mysterious helicopter activity on their side of the Hong Kong border. The secret speculation is that this may be a dramatic attempt to block the escape of high-ranking Chinese defectors. States a secret report on the incidents: "The location and pattern of the various radar tracks suggest that the helicopter flights were possibly related to anti-illegal immigration defector measures. The use of helicopters in this role in the immediate border area has no known precedent ... That helicopters might be used to prevent the defection of one or more high-level communist cadres is not being ruled out. Although difficult to substantiate, the present political situation in Communist China increases this possibility."

OUR DRUG SUBCULTURE

The national school public relations association reports that there is stark evidence of a drug subculture that has taken root in America and found fertile breeding grounds in the schools.

President Nixon's "deliberately cautious" estimate is that 16 per cent of the nation's 18 million high school students are experimenting with marijuana. Most doctors, educators and drug authorities believe the figure is closer to 25 or 35 per cent.

The public relations association report says: "This means that up to 6 million students are taking drugs illegally." It added that some 50,000 school children are addicted hopelessly on herion.

The survey found high rates of drug abuse in big cities. It reported that 40 per cent of San Francisco's junior and senior high school students were experimenting with drugs. The figure was 22 per cent for Houston.

Some teachers may use drugs themselves. It has been suggested that high school students and teachers undergo tests to spot drug users. Drug abuse reflects the failure of adults to enforce discipline in their homes, their schools and their cities.

Russell Townsley writes that raising money isn't easy. Recently, the president of McPherson college resigned. Buried in the platitudes which accompany announcements of such a delicate nature was the impression that the president's skills as an administrator were not as important to trustees as was the ability to wring money from alumni and friends of the college.

The conflict between the need for management and the need for money is not limited to colleges. It is found in privately- endowed hospitals, churches, museums, child-care centers, even in community programs.

Yet we are concerned about the procession of projects -- local, state and national -- which the public is asked to underwrite. We can't blame those who hold back until they find assurance that their donations will be properly used.

WOMEN AND POLITICS

The women's liberation movement is buckling down to the realities of election - year politics. The new breed of woman wants a stronger voice in the power centers of government. To get it, she is not above using some of the tactics of the male "sexist" politician who now runs the show. The National Women's political Caucus, for example, is going to stage a fund-raising event on Thursday, Feb. 3, in Washington -- not a $100-a-plate dinner but a $25-a-person "champagne benefit." To entertain the paying guests, the sponsors promise a "Right-on" program featuring the humorist, Art Buchwald, as master of ceremonies; the women's lib "glamor girl", Gloria Steinem; New York City's outspoken congresswoman Bella Abzug and other celebrities. Funds will be used to finance Caucus activities.

That the women mean business is indicated by the rapid growth of a national network of state and local women's political caucuses. All are dedicated to getting out the women's vote, pushing forward potential women candidates, and electing candidates who favor the women's platform. Thirty state caucuses have gone into action since the national caucus was formed last July, and women's groups are working to form more in other states. A prime goal of the state caucuses is to gain influence over the selection of delegates to the presidential conventions of both major parties.

Women are crossing party lines and setting aside liberal - conservative differences to unite on this new political enterprise. Perhaps the best indication of the political clout of the women is that nearly all of the Democratic hopefuls for the presidential nomination and their wives -- as well as wives of a number of top officials in the Nixon administration – are listed as "bi-partisan Friends of the Benefit."

THE SUCCESS FACTOR

An inquiry was sent by the Carnegie Foundation to a group of successful engineers. They were asked this question:

"In determining probably success or failure in your profession, what factors do you count most important?"

Some 1,500 replies were received. To the surprise of everyone, the technical training factor was voted relatively unimportant. What was given first place was character. Character received seven times as many votes.

A second inquiry was sent to members of four engineering societies. Six groups of qualities were listed: character, judgment, understanding of men, knowledge of life, and technical skill.

Aspirin was first made in 1853, by a German chemist, von Gerhardt. But, its value as a medicine was not discovered until 46 years later, in 1899. According to the experts, Americans consume a column of aspirin higher than the Empire State Building every three minutes around the clock. This means that approximately 16 billion aspirins or 8,000 tons of this pain-easing, fever-lowering medicine are taken each year. And with good reason. Aspirin really works, and is one of the safest medicines in the world!

FREEDOM PAYS

Only five states doubled their per capita income between the years 1960 and 1970.

During the same period, 19 states created 1,362,000 jobs while the 31 others managed to come up with 1,259,000.

And those same 19 states lost only 9,124,000 man days due to strike action against 57,268,000 in the 31 others.

What the states with those favorable economic indicators had in common was this: Each has a Right to Work law that guarantees the essential freedom to workers to join or not to join and pay dues to a union.

That, of course, is the basic purpose of such laws barring all forms of compulsory unionism. But one of the "side effects" of this protected freedom for the working man is even-handed treatment of management and unions alike.

This ultimately provides a climate that attracts new industry and benefits everybody.

Reports of the U. S. Department of Labor and the U. S. Department of Commerce show this conclusively, for the 19 Right to Work states continue to lead the nation in rate of economic growth.

.... Between 1960 and 1970 the Right to Work states created more jobs than the other 31 combined. In absolute figures this amounted to 1,362,000 jobs as opposed to 1,259,000 in states permitting compulsory unionism.; in terms of percentages, this amounted to a 43.1% gain as opposed to 26.9%.

.... Expenditures for new plants and equipment for the 1960-1968 period skyrocketed by 137.2% in Right to Work states as opposed to 94.7% in non-Right to Work states.

.... Per capita personal income between 1960 and 1970 shot up 84.2% in Right to Work states; comparable figures for non-Right to Work states was 73.7%.

.... There was less unemployment in Right to Work states in 1970 than in compulsory unionism states. Figures were 4.2% in voluntary unionism states vs. 5.1% in states permitting compulsory unionism.

.... In states without Right to Work laws, much more time (.41% of working time in those states as opposed to .26% in Right to Work states) was lost through work stoppages due to strike action. The number of man days lost in 1970 in non-Right to Work states totaled 57,268,000; in Right to Work states, 9,124,000.

The figures clearly show that a climate of freedom helps nurture the economy, proving a boon to everybody — workers, investors and the public.

More over, it eliminates the crisis- plagued atmosphere accompanying demands by union professionals for forced unionism. As AFL-CIO President George Meany himself admits, strikes over compulsory unionism are a "frequent cause of industrial strife."

The issue is basically one of freedom for the working man — and the figures provide clear proof that the economy flourishes under that freedom and withers under compulsion.

WHAT TAX RELIEF?

Whatever tax relief is obtained either at the local or national level will be more than wiped out by Social Security tax increases. A bill now before Congress would, as a bulletin of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce comments, mean an "oppressive tax burden."The bill provides for a five per cent across - the-board increase in benefits effective June, 1972. The bill also provides for automatic increases in benefits and in the amount of "exempt" annual earnings under the retirement test.

The Chamber bulletin reports too that the bill would mean "... an oppressive Social Security Medicare tax burden on workers and employers. In 1972, taxes on workers and employers would be increased $4.2 billion. The cumulative tax increase over the next six years would amount to $57 billion." Meanwhile, in the past 21 months, Congress has increased the social security benefits twice -- by over 25 per cent in the aggregate.

The future of social security and social security taxes is more than an economic question; it is a political question. Granting social se rity increases is an increasingly irresistible political vote-getting tactic. The accompanying tax increases will be played down as much as possible.

As for "tax relief," only the most naive will believe such a myth.

WAR PRISONERS HAVE RIGHTS TOO

U. S. servicemen fortunate enough to win their way back to freedom from North Vietnamese detention have affirmed that prisoners are often subjected to unspeakable abuses and torture.

Recent action of the American Red Cross to intensify efforts to open channels of communication and relief to U. S. servicemen being held as prisoners of war in North Vietnam is highlighted by the approval of a resolution adopted by representatives of 77 governments and 91 national Red Cross societies, urging that prisoners of war be given the benefits and protection of the Geneva Conventions. This means, as Sen. Fulbright of Arkansas observes: "Irrespective of the nature of the conflict which gives rise to his imprisonment a captor should be mindful, in the words of the Convention, that a prisoner is in the hands of a detaining power 'as a result of circumstances independent of his own will.' He should, as recited in the International Red Cross Conference resolution, be promptly identified; afforded an adequate diet and medical care; permitted to communicate with other prisoners and with the exterior; promptly repatriated if seriously sick or wounded; and at all times be protected from abuse or reprisals. And, as specifically prescribed in the Convention, a neutral intermediary such as the International Committee of the Red Cross should be afforded free access to prisoners of war and their places of detention."

FOREVER AN ART

Heavy emphasis has been placed on programs to attain an all=encompassing medical care system. The goal seems to be quantitative medicine. Progress is measured in numbers-- so many doctors, so many hospitals and other health care facilities for so many hundreds of millions of people. The trouble with such a system in the field of medicine is that no matter how many people there are, the population is made up of individuals, and no two individuals are alike.

Subjecting the individual to assembly-line medical care is something that the U. S. medical profession is dedicated to avoiding. It believes complete medical care must be measured in quality, as well as quantity. As the Dean of Pennsylvania State. Univ. College of Medicine points out: "The patient does not wish to be treated as a statistic from a group approach, but as an individual–a person. The practice of medicine has historically been considered an art. It rests more and more on a scientific base, but because of biologic variability, the data collected on an individual patient cannot meet scientific criteria; hence, the practice of medicine will forever remain an art. Practice can be looked upon as a highly confidential interpersonal relationship. The emphasis in the educational program should be on the individual..whether he be student, patient, or physician-teacher."

The U. S. system of government and of private enterprise, and the freedoms we enjoy under it, rest solidly on the premise that the individual is important. Nowhere is the individual more important than in the realm of health care. The American medical system is tailored to the American philosophy of individualism. A cardinal aim of national health care policies and programs should be to preserve, as well as to expand, the present system.

SIXTH GRADE CAPITALISM

A new kind of grading system has been adopted by a sixth grade Calif. school teacher. It is based on a point and incentive system that pays the student in imaginary dollars, for good work and fines him when he falls down on the job. The teacher says the system works:"... It has done away with grades. I substitute academic dollars."

At the beginning of the year, the instructor gives each pupil a $500 credit to start the semester. The nest egg expands or shrinks, according to the caliber of academic work produced by its owner. Students can build small empires. A superior student can acquire a firm that dispenses facts to those who were inattentive in class or didn't do homework. There are about a dozen other firms successful students can buy and operate. They also may earn academic dollars for helping slower students, for good work habits and for cooperation in class. Says the instructor: "You can't keep the kids at home. They come even when they're sick...The students are motivated to work."

When parents criticize the idea of bringing capitalism to the schools, the teacher answers, "But I'm teaching the American way of life..." What is wrong with capitalism? The imaginative California schoolteacher deserves praise. We need more like him.

POWER IN THE INDIAN OCEAN

The abbreviated war nvolving India and Pakistan brought U.S. naval forces in strength into the Indian Ocean where Russian fleet units had been prowling in a Soviet version of gunboat diplomacy. The Indian Ocean has become a new area of interest for Washington as the British navy pulled back into its shell and the Russians, making huge strides in naval strength, began to intrude with its missile cruisers. It is now obvious that the Soviets activity of recent months was aimed at impressing India.

When Pakistan and India locked horns in land combat, the U.S. sent its mightiest warship, the nuclear carrier Enterprise, into the Indian Ocean in a show of strength. Quickly the Russian cruisers, powerfully armed, maneuvered in the same ocean. It is possible that the brevity of the land fighting prevented a confrontation at sea.

Now the United States is improving its naval facilities in the area, including the port at Bahrein on the Persian Gulf. It is to be hoped that the nations of Asis are impressed by our show of strength. They, and the peoples of all nations, will be even more impressed if we start catching up on modern naval power. We need more cruisers and submarines armed to fight surface-to -surface and thus reduce the threat of the ever-expanding Russian navy. The Indian Ocean has become a critical area. But so are the Pacific and Atlantic, our traditional shields from aggressors. A revitalized navy and stepped up land missile program are vital to our defense against the powerful communist nations whose intentions have always been the domination of the freedom-loving peoples of the world of which we, the citizens of the United States, constitute a large part.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON -- Classified documents in our possession reveal, unhappily, that deception is still the official policy in Vietnam.

The raw facts about the Vietnam War go through a filtering and flavoring process, which can be ascribed partly to a natural desire to make American troops look as heroic as possible, partly to the Pentagon's determination to portray the war as the top brass want the world to see it.

A classified memo to all top U.S. officials in the pacification program, for example, bluntly tells them to be misleading at command briefings. These are special briefings for visiting newsmen and dignitaries. The memo, therefore, is an order to flavor the well of truth at its source.

Small wonder that Brig. Gen. James Herbert, a top U.S. deputy in the pacification program, ordered that "Overall security classification will be SECRET."

Dated September 8, 1971, the memo mentions the disaster-ridden programs for helping war victims and for persuading the Viet cong and North Vietnamese to defect. U.S. officials in charge of these programs are directed only to "submit material which reflects progress" for th briefings.

To carry out this aim, all pacification officials must "develop ten or twelve high impact indicators that say persuasively that much progress has been made; that our effort has not been a fruitless venture; that we have helped to establish conditions and build systems that at least give the Republic of Vietnam an opportunity to choose its future course of events.

"Final thought should be that a strong, broadly based military establishment has been created in RVN (South Vietnam) that will be difficult to destroy by military action....."

Our Vietnamese allies are even more blatant in faking success where none exists. A calssified U.S. translation of an order by the late Lt. Gen. Do Cao Tri explains all those slogans that visitors to Vietnam are shown, as evidence of pro-Saigon sentiment, in hamlets and along the roads.

Soldiers and civilians in his military region were ordered by Gen. Tri to "display national flags at every village/hamelt office and person's home. Paint national flag 20 x27 centimeters on ehouter walls of the homes.

"Draw as many of the folloiwng slogans as possible on the blank walls: 'To coalesce with the Communists is suicide,' 'We are determined not to concede any land to the Communists,' 'To Chieu Hoi (defect) is the only way to end the War and restore Peace.'

"Depending on the local situation, all utilization of leaflets, slogans and banners must be exploited to the fullest. These operations must be completed in one week.....Results should be reported to (TRI) and should include .....the number of villages and hamlets where flags were displayed, and the number of slogans, leaflets, and banners distributed at the localities."

This attitude of fakery and falsehood extends down to every level. For example, Americans have been repeatedly told about the increasing number of hamlets which are secure from Communist control.

A high U.S. pacification offial, Wilbur Wilson, tells in a confidential memo, dated August 19, 1971, how he cut two Viet Cong-controlled hamlets out of a district simply by gerrymandering the district Tammany-style.

"The District Chief has recommended that the boundaries of these two hamlets be charged," Wilson told his superiors. Actually, the Viet Cong have been making inroads inplaces that were formerly free of Communists, even as the American people have been told the opposite.

For example, a classified U.S. study showed that by July 1971, 77 outposts had been overrun in the vast Fourth Military District, compared to 44 at the same time in 1970 and 67 for all of 1970.

Perhaps U.S. officials simply are sick of the truths in Vietnam, and would rather read soft, sweet lies. As a symptom of this, we can quote from a memo written to his aides by Richard Funkhouser, Pacification Head for a giant area north of Saigon.

Poll Says Nixon Would Win Now

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

A national opinion poll says if an election were held today President Nixon would be reelected by a narrow margin.

Sindlinger Co. Inc. of Swarthmore, Pa., said it polled 954 men and 1,035 women across the country after Nixon's Jan. 25 disclosure of his latest peace initiatives.

Nearly two-thirds of those interviewed said they believed the President was doing his best to end the war, and 50.6 per cent said they would vote to re-elect him now. Only 16.7 per cent said they opposed Nixon; 24.9 per cent were undecided, and 7.7 per cent said they did not vote.

Albert Sindlinger, president of the polling firm, said the figures released Tuesday contrast with a similar poll last July that showed only 26.7 per cent favored re-election of the President.

When put up against a full field of possible contenders, Nixon polled 48.6 per cent with Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine leading Democratic hopefuls with 13.9 per cent, followed by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, 7.1 per cent; Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, 7 per cent; and Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama and Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York, 2.4 per cent each. Other candidates and potential candidates received only a fraction of 1 per cent each.

Meanwhile, Sen. Kennedy's office said the Massachusetts Democrat would withdraw his name from the April 4 Wisconsin presidential primary ballot. Kennedy, who insists he is not a candidate, was among 13 Democrats and three Republicans whose names were placed on the ballot by a bipartisan nominating committee.

In addition to Kennedy, Democratic candidates named in Wisconsin are: Muskie, Humphrey, Wallace, Lindsay, Sens. George McGovern of South Dakota, Henry M. Jackson of Washington, Vance Hartke of Indiana, former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles and Reps. Shirley Chisholm of New York, Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas and Patsy Mink of Hawaii.

Mills, though often mentioned as a possible contender, has not announced his candidacy, and Mrs. Mink's supporters have taken steps to enter her in the Oregon primary, although she has not formally declared her candidacy.

Nixon and his challengers, Reps. Paul N. McCloskey Jr. of California and John M. Ashbrook of Ohio, are listed on the GOP ballot.

Activities of the candidates Tuesday included:

JACKSON—Speaking to the Tiger Bay political club in Miami, Sen. Jackson said the Democratic party should lead "a taxpayers' revolt" against a federal tax system that leaves millionaires tax-free while wage-earners carry the burden.

He called the Nixon administration's consideration of a value-added tax—"a sales tax in disguise"—"absurd when closing major income tax loopholes could produce $20 billion in new revenues."

MUSKIE—The Maine senator said listening to teenagers in a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., drug rehabilitation center tell him how they kicked the habit gave him "the warmest, most encouraging feeling I have had for a long, long time."

"What you are learning," Muskie told the young people, "is something we have to learn throughout this country—something we've forgotten. There is something missing in family life, in school life and in community life. You can't legislate this problem."

HUMPHREY—The Minnesota senator visited cigar factories and restaurants in Latin and Negro areas of Tampa, Fla., handing out pens and collecting cigars. At a news conference, he called the value-added tax "another tax, and that's not going to solve the problem."

Israel Agrees To Suez Canal Talks

JERUSALEM (AP) -- Israel has agreed to hold indirect talks with Egypt on the reopening of the Suez Canal, Foreign Minister Abba Eban said today.

The United States would be the go-between in the talks, but Washington has not yet approached the Egyptians. And Al Ahram, the semiofficial Cairo newspaper, reported Tuesday that Egyptian President Anwar Sadat had said he has "completely cut off all contacts with the U.S."

Eban said after a special two-hour meeting of the Israeli Cabinet that talks had been completed in Washington clarifying the U.S. government's role in the proposed negotiations.

The Israeli go-ahead was announced as Sadat prepared to visit Moscow for talks with Soviet leaders.

Israeli officials said the preliminary talks with the United States had been completed to Israel's satisfaction Tuesday in a series of telephone calls in Washington between Israeli Ambassador Yitzhak Rabin and Joseph Sisco, American assistant secretary of state for Middle Eastern affairs.

Details were not announced. But a communique said:

"The Government decided to inform the U.S.administration of its readiness to take part in these talks. . . aimed at reaching a special agreement on the reopening of the Suez Canal.

In Cairo, an official Egyptian spokesman said any Israeli decision would have to be relayed to U.N. mediator Gunnar Jarring before the Egyptian government would comment on it. Although Sadat has rejected U.S. participation to supply more warplanes to Israel, he has repeatedly left the door open for U.N. mediation.

Egypt refused previously to go ahead with an aggreement to reopen the canal because the Israeli government would not make an advance commitment to withdraw eventually from the entire Sinai desert.

Premier Golda Meir said Tuesday night that Jarrings's peace mission had reached a stalemate because he had presented his own demands in stead of leaving the bargain up to Israel and the Arabs.

Mrs. Meir said once Washington and Jerusalem reached a "clear understanding," Egypt would realize that "despite her MIGS, missiles, tanks and Russian personnel," she was in no position to threaten war against the Jewish state.

The Israelis demanded that the Americans confine themselves to acting as go-betweens and not put forward any recommendations for a settlement, as Jarring did last February.

French-Speaking Demo Wins Governor's Race

NEW ORLEANS (AP) -- Rep. Edwin Edwards, a French- speaking Democrat who overwhelmed the most serious Republican challenge in recent Louisiana history, will be the state's next governor.

Edwards, the 44- year-old son of a sharecropper, stumped his native south Louisiana with a campaign in French and polled a 57 per cent majority over Republican David Treen in Tuesday's election.

With only 56 precincts still to report, Edwards had 628,391 votes to Treen's 469,868.

It was the strongest showing by the GOP in a governor's race in nearly a century in this traditionally Democratic state.

For Edwards, the election climaxed victories in the Nov. 6 Democratic primary and a Dec. 18 runoff with state Sen. J. Bennett Johnston. Edwards defeated Johnston by less than one-half of one per cent in the narrowest election victory in Louisiana history.

The dapper, self - assured Edwards credited "Cajun Power" with playing a major role in his victory. The reference was to the heavy support he received in French-speaking south Louisiana.

Both Edwards and Treen had run reform campaigns, promising to clean up corruption and get rid of inefficiency in government. They conceded there was little difference between them on some major issues, and Gov. John McKeithen, limited by law to two four-year terms, refused to endorse either.

Taxpayers Encouraged To Fill Out Own Forms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is pushing a do-it-yourself movement among the nation's taxpayers in hopes that more will fill out their own returns this year.

IRS officials say they expect a decline in the number of taxpayers who use professional accounting services to fill out their returns for them. Commissioner Johnnie M. Walters said he hopes at least 30 million people can fill out their own returns this year.

IRS says there is no reason a taxpayer who earned under $20,000 a year, most of it in salaries and wages, should pay a company to fill out his return.

"We have stressed the fact that it's simple enough," Walters said. "The instructions and the illustrated examples in the tax booklet make filling out a return simple."

In a number of cases, the commissioner said, taxpayers who take the standard deduction have paid to get their return filed. He said the return is so simple that if a standard deduction is involved "your daughter in the fifth grade can fill it out this year."

Walters cited the case of a Florida man who paid $85 to get his return filled out last year when the simple one-page Form 1040 was involved and the man took the standard deduction.

The IRS has taken steps to eliminate abuses traced to errors by professional tax preparers. Walters said a number of sanctions are being considered against such companies, such as extending the negligence penalty to cover persons who prepared returns for money and requiring preparers to keep copies of all returns for at least three years.

The IRS has put into effect this year a system allowing an automatic two-month extension of the April 15 filing deadline for taxpayers.

Under this rule, a taxpayer must make a tentative estimate of the tax he owes, fill out an application for extension, and pay the estimated tax by the deadline. He can file his tax return two months later so long as he pays interest on any additional amounts due. If he has underestimated his tax bill by 10 per cent, he must pay an additional 6-per-cent penalty.

Booneville Hog Foresees Early Spring

BOONVILLE, Mo. (AP) — George Groundhog, a reliable Feb. 2 weather forecaster, failed to see his shadow upon emerging from his bachelor quarters today, therefore forecasting an early spring.

In making the prediction, George, who resides in a condominium in Groundhog Gulch in south Boonville, renewed his annual feud with Punxsutawney Phil, a Pennsylvania groundhog who alleges the ability to forecast weather for the next six weeks.

George Groundhog says Punxsutawney Phill may have some ability to foresee weather conditions in the eastern part of the country, but is a total flop where the Midwest is concerned.

George is a third-generation weatherman, with both his grandfather and father holding the position before him. He is maintained by a Boonville radio station.

Punxsutawney Phil Predicts Long Winter

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) — Punxsutawney Phil, the forecasting groundhog, today predicted six more weeks of winter.

Not so, claims the Slumbering Groundhog of Quarryville, Pa. who predicted an early spring in the annual Groundhog Day forecasting.

Phil actually did his annual hocus pocus at a special recording session Sunday when he was brought to his burrow on snow-covered Gobbler's Knob in a cage.

It is not known whether Ray Dunlap, of Quarryville, who calls himself minister of public information, actually observed a groundhog emerging, staged or not, but he proclaimed that "Marmota Monax, the illustrious prophet of the Slumbering Groundhog of Quarryville did not see his shadow, thus predicting an early spring."

The groundhogs were not available for further comment.

Poll Says Nixon Would Win Now

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

A national opinion poll says if an election were held today President Nixon would be reelected by a narrow margin.

Sindlinger Co. Inc. of Swarthmore, Pa., said it polled 954 men and 1,035 women across the country after Nixon's Jan. 25 disclosure of his latest peace initiatives.

Nearly two-thirds of those interviewed said they believed the President was doing his best to end the war, and 50.6 per cent said they would vote to re-elect him now. Only 16.7 per cent said they opposed Nixon; 24.9 per cent were undecided, and 7.7 per cent said they did not vote.

Albert Sindlinger, president of the polling firm, said the figures released Tuesday contrast with a similar poll last July that showed only 26.7 per cent favored re-election of the President.

When put up against a full field of possible contenders, Nixon polled 48.6 per cent with Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine leading Democratic hopefuls with 13.9 per cent, followed by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, 7.1 per cent; Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, 7 per cent; and Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama and Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York, 2.4 per cent each. Other candidates and potential candidates received only a fraction of 1 per cent each.

Meanwhile, Sen. Kennedy's office said the Massachusetts Democrat would withdraw his name from the April 4 Wisconsin presidential primary ballot. Kennedy, who insists he is not a candidate, was among 13 Democrats and three Republicans whose names were placed on the ballot by a bipartisan nominating committee.

In addition to Kennedy, Democratic candidates named in Wisconsin are: Muskie, Humphrey, Wallace, Lindsay, Sens. George McGovern of South Dakota, Henry M. Jackson of Washington, Vance Hartke of Indiana, former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles and Reps. Shirley Chisholm of New York, Wilbur D. Mills of Arkansas and Patsy Mink of Hawaii.

Mills, though often mentioned as a possible contender, has not announced his candidacy, and Mrs. Mink's supporters have taken steps to enter her in the Oregon primary, although she has not formally declared her candidacy.

Nixon and his challengers, Reps. Paul N. McCloskey Jr. of California and John M. Ashbrook of Ohio, are listed on the GOP ballot.

Activities of the candidates Tuesday included:

JACKSON—Speaking to the Tiger Bay political club in Miami, Sen. Jackson said the Democratic party should lead "a taxpayers' revolt" against a federal tax system that leaves millionaires tax-free while wage-earners carry the burden.

He called the Nixon administration's consideration of a value-added tax—"a sales tax in disguise"—"absurd when closing major income tax loopholes could produce $20 billion in new revenues."

MUSKIE—The Maine senator said listening to teenagers in a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., drug rehabilitation center tell him how they kicked the habit gave him "the warmest, most encouraging feeling I have had for a long, long time."

"What you are learning," Muskie told the young people, "is something we have to learn throughout this country—something we've forgotten. There is something missing in family life, in school life and in community life. You can't legislate this problem."

HUMPHREY—The Minnesota senator visited cigar factories and restaurants in Latin and Negro areas of Tampa, Fla., handing out pens and collecting cigars. At a news conference, he called the value-added tax "another tax, and that's not going to solve the problem."

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hux

Hux-Szymanski

NILES, Ill. — St. Louis will be the home of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hux who were married Jan. 8.

Kathleen Szymanski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Szymanski of Niles and James M. Hux, son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Hux, Sr., of Sikeston, exchanged vows in a 4:30 p.m. Mass in St. John Brebeuf Church.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ivory satin empire gown with a full train. Clusters of lace appliques accented the teardrop inlays around the dress, sleeves and yoke; her veil was held in place by a small cap trimmed in the same lace. She carried a colonial bouquet of stephanotis, white sweetheart roses, carnations and baby's breath.

The four attending bridesmaids wore plum velvet dresses in Juliet-style with lace yokes trimmed in tiny flowers. The maid of honor's dress was in a complementary moss green. All attendants held colonial bouquets of heather, carnations, statice and baby's breath.

John D. Hux, Jr., was his brother's best man. The groom's other attendents were classmates.

Music was furnished by the church Senior Choir before and during the Mass. The love Theme from Romeo and Juliet was selected for processionals.

Mrs. Hux graduated from Resurrection High School in 1968. She attended the University of Dayton and Northwestern University where she graduated in 1971.

Mr. Hux also attended Northwestern University, graduating in 1971. He is a law student at Washington University in St. Louis.

Following a honeymoon trip to New Orleans the couple will return to St. Louis.

Ann Landers

Support Your Local Pastor

Dear Ann Landers: After 23 years of marriage my husband and I were divorced. He wanted a new life. That was seven months ago.

Last week I learned he is engaged to marry a girl young enough to be his daughter. I was not surprised because I knew he had been seeing some young girls. What bothers me is that they plan to be married in the same church, at the same altar where we were married. Our children were christened in that church, attended Sunday school and were confirmed there. We had our first date at the Youth Fellowship Dance in the social hall.

Some of my relatives have made a formal protest to the pastor. (He is new to the community and rather young.) The pastor has indicated that he does not feel it would be appropriate for him to take sides, and that his duty is to perform the ceremony at the place selected by the bride and groom. Please understand that I am not attempting to prevent the marriage, Ann. I object only to having it take place in the church that holds such meaningful memories for me.

Do you feel the pastor is conducting himself in a Christian manner? I do not believe he is, nor does my family. ---Heartbroken Former Wife

Dear Former Wife: Three distinguished Protestant clergymen support the new pastor. They say it is his responsibility to remain neutral and to perform his duties.

Your former husband obviously feels warmly about his church but in a strange and sick way he has blocked you out of his memory insofar as the church is concerned. This may be difficult to accept, but accept it you must. My own opinion is that he is grossly insensitive and inconsiderate but you must not condemn the pastor for your former husband's inadequacies.

Dear Ann Landers: I am having a big argument with my mother. I will be 15 in May and I want to let my girl friend pierce my ears. My mother promised me last year that I could get my ears pierced for my 15th birthday but she wants a doctor to do it. I say it is not a medical thing, it's a beauty thing. My girl friend uses ice cubes and a needle and it's a lot easier than making a major operation out of it.My friend has done her own ears as well as her sister's, and nobody had any trouble. Please say yes. Thank you. --New Haven

Dear New Haven: I'm saying NO. Too many things can go wrong when ear-piercing is done by a friend. For example: infection, allergy to the metal and keloid problems. Putting a needle through a part of your anatomy is a medical thing -- not a beauty thing -- and it shold not be done by a friend, unless that friend is a doctor.

Dear Ann Landers: Why is it that people who are tone deaf are always the ones whose voices can be heard above all the others when they are singing the National Anthem at a public gathering, hymns in church or "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" at a Kiwanis meeting? I have never been able to figure this out. My husband is one of the guilty parties and when I mention it to him he gets insulted and denies that he is off key. Please explain. ---Juuilliard Graduate

Dear Julie: Tone deaf people are just that. Tone deaf. My own husband can't carry a note with a co-singer, but he loves to sing loud and it's O.K. with me. One of the secrets of a decent marriage is to save the criticism for something that matters.

Is an upcoming wedding driving you bananas? Ann Landers' comprehensive booklet, "The Bride's Guide," gives you the facts from the initial announcement to the last bill and who should pay it. To receive your copy, write to Ann Landers, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 35 cents in coin.

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hux

Hux-Szymanski

NILES, Ill. — St. Louis will be the home of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hux who were married Jan. 8.

Kathleen Szymanski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Szymanski of Niles and James M. Hux, son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Hux, Sr., of Sikeston, exchanged vows in a 4:30 p.m. Mass in St. John Brebeuf Church.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an ivory satin empire gown with a full train. Clusters of lace appliques accented the teardrop inlays around the dress, sleeves and yoke; her veil was held in place by a small cap trimmed in the same lace. She carried a colonial bouquet of stephanotis, white sweetheart roses, carnations and baby's breath.

The four attending bridesmaids wore plum velvet dresses in Juliet-style with lace yokes trimmed in tiny flowers. The maid of honor's dress was in a complementary moss green. All attendants held colonial bouquets of heather, carnations, statice and baby's breath.

John D. Hux, Jr., was his brother's best man. The groom's other attendents were classmates.

Music was furnished by the church Senior Choir before and during the Mass. The love Theme from Romeo and Juliet was selected for processionals.

Mrs. Hux graduated from Resurrection High School in 1968. She attended the University of Dayton and Northwestern University where she graduated in 1971.

Mr. Hux also attended Northwestern University, graduating in 1971. He is a law student at Washington University in St. Louis.

Following a honeymoon trip to New Orleans the couple will return to St. Louis.

Ann Landers

Support Your Local Pastor

Dear Ann Landers: After 23 years of marriage my husband and I were divorced. He wanted a new life. That was seven months ago.

Last week I learned he is engaged to marry a girl young enough to be his daughter. I was not surprised because I knew he had been seeing some young girls. What bothers me is that they plan to be married in the same church, at the same altar where we were married. Our children were christened in that church, attended Sunday school and were confirmed there. We had our first date at the Youth Fellowship Dance in the social hall.

Some of my relatives have made a formal protest to the pastor. (He is new to the community and rather young.) The pastor has indicated that he does not feel it would be appropriate for him to take sides, and that his duty is to perform the ceremony at the place selected by the bride and groom. Please understand that I am not attempting to prevent the marriage, Ann. I object only to having it take place in the church that holds such meaningful memories for me.

Do you feel the pastor is conducting himself in a Christian manner? I do not believe he is, nor does my family. ---Heartbroken Former Wife

Dear Former Wife: Three distinguished Protestant clergymen support the new pastor. They say it is his responsibility to remain neutral and to perform his duties.

Your former husband obviously feels warmly about his church but in a strange and sick way he has blocked you out of his memory insofar as the church is concerned. This may be difficult to accept, but accept it you must. My own opinion is that he is grossly insensitive and inconsiderate but you must not condemn the pastor for your former husband's inadequacies.

Dear Ann Landers: I am having a big argument with my mother. I will be 15 in May and I want to let my girl friend pierce my ears. My mother promised me last year that I could get my ears pierced for my 15th birthday but she wants a doctor to do it. I say it is not a medical thing, it's a beauty thing. My girl friend uses ice cubes and a needle and it's a lot easier than making a major operation out of it.My friend has done her own ears as well as her sister's, and nobody had any trouble. Please say yes. Thank you. --New Haven

Dear New Haven: I'm saying NO. Too many things can go wrong when ear-piercing is done by a friend. For example: infection, allergy to the metal and keloid problems. Putting a needle through a part of your anatomy is a medical thing -- not a beauty thing -- and it shold not be done by a friend, unless that friend is a doctor.

Dear Ann Landers: Why is it that people who are tone deaf are always the ones whose voices can be heard above all the others when they are singing the National Anthem at a public gathering, hymns in church or "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" at a Kiwanis meeting? I have never been able to figure this out. My husband is one of the guilty parties and when I mention it to him he gets insulted and denies that he is off key. Please explain. ---Juuilliard Graduate

Dear Julie: Tone deaf people are just that. Tone deaf. My own husband can't carry a note with a co-singer, but he loves to sing loud and it's O.K. with me. One of the secrets of a decent marriage is to save the criticism for something that matters.

Is an upcoming wedding driving you bananas? Ann Landers' comprehensive booklet, "The Bride's Guide," gives you the facts from the initial announcement to the last bill and who should pay it. To receive your copy, write to Ann Landers, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 35 cents in coin.

Army Wife-Of-Year Resigns

FT. LEONARD WOOD, Mo. (AP) — The U.S. Army's Wifeof-the-Year has sent in her resignation to the Army's top brass as a protest of "the crass, rude and unforgivable wording in letters of release sent to officers", including her husband.

Mrs. Billie Willett said her husband, Chief Warrant Officer Paul Willett, stationed at Ft. Leonard Wood, received a letter from the Pentagon last Thursday giving him the option of retiring or being released after 22 years service.

Mrs. Willett said her husband had forbidden her to release portions of the Pentagon letter she found objectionable. She said it was her protest, not his.

"I must admit," she said, "that his letter is not as bad as some of the others who have received these letters." She said about 100 officers of the Missouri Army post had received similar notifications.

She said her husband planned no appeal of his own but "would abide by the Army's decision."

Maj. Willis Has, base public information officer, said letters of release had been received by officers on active duty and were related to the Defense Department's plan of reducing the Army's manpower. He would not comment on Mrs. Willett's resignation.

In In her letter Mrs. Willett said:

"My husband and I have been completely loyal, but the Army has not.

"I find it impossible under these circumstances to continue bearing a title, of which I was extremely proud, but of which I am now deeply ashamed. I trust the thousands of Army wives I was representing will understand this was the only action I could take in all good conscience under the circumstances.

Copies of her letter were sent to Army Secretary Robert F. Froehlke; Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Army chief of staff; Brig. Gen. Winant Sidle, chief of public information and Brig. Gen. W. P. Bradley, commanding officer of Ft. Leonard Wood.

In another part of her letter, Mrs. Willett said:

"I also consider it an insult to me personally when my husband was sent such a letter during the time I was serving as Army Wife-of-the-Year. The Army does itself no good by wording letters of release in such a manner; a soldier is made to feel less than a man.

"I have tried very hard to improve the image of the Army, which needs improving badly. The Army is its own worst enemy."

Mrs. Willett said she was also sending her trophy back to the Secretary of the Army.

She said her husband had planned to make the Army a 30-year career. The letter from Washington "took us completely by surprise," she said.

She said he was unaware of the method used in selecting officers to be cut. But in her letter she said the MOS (military occupational specialty) of her husband was listed as a critical one. She said he is a certified criminal investigator and a licensed polygraph examiner.

Willett now is "looking for a job," his wife said. "He feels with his background and experience, it shouldn't bee too difficult to get one here in Missouri.

Book Review

THE PRESIDENT
by Drew Pearson
(Avon J125/$1.50
608 pp.)

THE PRESIDENT is Drew Pearson's major work, the distillation and crowning achievement of a lifetime spent covering the Washington scene. THE PRESIDENT is a novel set in contemporary Washington as America's stability is shaken by domestic upheaval and the chief executive himself is under bitter criticism for his programs and his beliefs.

Elected by a mere 33% of the total vote, the President quells student riots and sends hundreds to prison camps. He confronts bitter racism dividing the nation and attempts to calm the violent outcries against the highest taxes ever levied in America. Finally only National Guardsmen can maintain order in the major American cities.

Within the government, the situation is just as desperate. The President's enemies in Congress institute impeachment proceedings against him as he proposes the most shocking solution ever conceived to save the country from its own self-destruction.

THE PRESIDENT is the "dynamic" (Baltimore Sun) and "compelling" (Washington Post) story of the brutal conflictss between government and the electorate and the even more frightening clashes between the powerful elected officials themselves.

Propst-Stroup Vows

GORDONVILLE — Miss Sharon Propst and Jerry Stroup were united in marriage last Saturday night at Zion United Methodist Church here.

The candlelight double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Roy Pinson before an latar adorned with greenery and caldelabra. Miss Connie Borgfield was organist, and Miss Bonita Seabough sang.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Propst of Gordonville, and Stroup is the son of of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Stroup of Bloomfield.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory angelskin peau de soie and reembroidered lace. The demibell silhouette featured an empire waistline and a lace yoke with a stand-up collar. Scalloped lace trimmed the Camelot sleeves, and the detachable train was touched with land-clipped jeweled lace motifs and swept from the waist to chapel length.

A contoured cap of reembroidered lace medallions held her chapel-length veil of ivory bridal illusion, and she carried a cascade of yellow roses, baby's breath and pompon chrysanthemums.

Miss Paula Wessel of Gordonville was maid of honor, and the bride's sister, Miss Carol Propst, was bridesmaid.

Rhonda Amelunke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Amelunke, and Danny Stroup, the bridegroom's brother, were flower girl and ringbearer respectively. The Misses Karen McGuire and Brenda Ulrich served as candlelighters.

Steve Pullum of Bloomfield was best man, and the groomsman was Wilbert Welker. Billy Propst, the bride's brother, and Lee Hankins of Bloomfield seated guests.

A reception followed in the church social room. Serving were Mrs. James Stoverink, Cuba; Mrs. Jack Martin, Cape Girardeau; Mrs. Paul Loerber and Miss Vernell Propst, Dutchtowm. Guest book attendant was Miss Janie Peetz;

The new Mrs. Stroup graduated from Jackson high school, and Cape Girardeau School of Beauty Culture. She will be employed at Petite Beauty Salon in Dexter.

Stroup is a senior at Bloomfield high school, and the couple is making their home in Bloomfield.

Confusion of Package Sizes Cause Her Peeve

By POLLY CRAMER

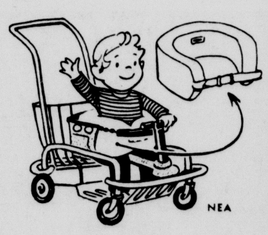
DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve pertains to all manufacturers who confuse us with their economy size, family size, giant size, supersize, etc., packages. Why can't they just stick to small, medium and large in their sizing?—MRS. M. J. U.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—How can we replace damaged ceiling tiles? A mouse came down from the attic by way of the lighting fixture wires and gnawed two holes in our new ceiling.—MRS. R. L. M.

DEAR POLLY—Mrs. R. L. B. might treat her stained and pitted bathtub which does not respond to cleansers and bleach as we did the tile floor in our shower stall, which now looks like new. Clean thoroughly and sandpaper any parts that are smooth and shiny. Clean again and let thoroughly dry. Apply epoxy enamel to the surface and let dry for several days before using the tub. A second application may be necessary and it should also be left to dry for several days.—MRS. G. L.

DEAR GIRLS—I have never seen a tub that has been so painted but know how satisfactory it is on bathroom tiles and also laminated kitchen counters which looked like new after six months' use.—POLLY



DEAR POLLY — When we first started to put baby in his walker we had a terrible time keeping him from slumping from one side to another. I discovered that our 4-year-old's ski belt, used for swimming, fit right around the inside of the walker. This gave baby the needed support and ended the slumping problem.—GEORGEANNE

Finally only National Guardsmen can maintain order in the major American cities.

Within the government, the situation is just as desperate. The President's enemies in Congress institute impeachment proceedings against him as he proposes the most shocking solution ever conceived to save the country from its own self-destruction.

THE PRESIDENT is the "dynamic" (Baltimore Sun) and ''compelling'' (Washington Post) story of the brutal conflictss between government and the electorate and the even more frightening clashes between the powerful elected officials themselves.

Propst-Stroup Vows

GORDONVILLE — Miss Sharon Propst and Jerry Stroup were united in marriage last Saturday night at Zion United Methodist Church here.

The candlelight double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Roy Pinson before an latar adorned with greenery and caldelabra. Miss Connie Borgfield was organist, and Miss Bonita Seabough sang.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Propst of Gordonville, and Stroup is the son of of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Stroup of Bloomfield.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory angelskin peau de soie and reembroidered lace. The demibell silhouette featured an empire waistline and a lace yoke with a stand-up collar. Scalloped lace trimmed the Camelot sleeves, and the detachable train was touched with land-clipped jeweled lace motifs and swept from the waist to chapel length.

A contoured cap of reembroidered lace medallions held her chapel-length veil of ivory bridal illusion, and she carried a cascade of yellow roses, baby's breath and pompon chrysanthemums.

Miss Paula Wessel of Gordonville was maid of honor, and the bride's sister, Miss Carol Propst, was bridesmaid.

Rhonda Amelunke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Amelunke, and Danny Stroup, the bridegroom's brother, were flower girl and ringbearer respectively. The Misses Karen McGuire and Brenda Ulrich served as candlelighters.

Steve Pullum of Bloomfield was best man, and the groomsman was Wilbert Welker. Billy Propst, the bride's brother, and Lee Hankins of Bloomfield seated guests.

A reception followed in the church social room. Serving were Mrs. James Stoverink, Cuba; Mrs. Jack Martin, Cape Girardeau; Mrs. Paul Loerber and Miss Vernell Propst, Dutchtowm. Guest book attendant was Miss Janie Peetz;

The new Mrs. Stroup graduated from Jackson high school, and Cape Girardeau School of Beauty Culture. She will be employed at Petite Beauty Salon in Dexter.

Stroup is a senior at Bloomfield high school, and the couple is making their home in Bloomfield.

The big news is you knit it yourself. Glamour magazine's fashion editors pulled this look together in their February issue with a bright yellow turtleneck sweater, purple jeans and a red knitted angora hat.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Confusion of Package Sizes Cause Her Peeve

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve pertains to all manufacturers who confuse us with their economy size, family size, giant size, supersize, etc., packages. Why can't they just stick to small, medium and large in their sizing?—MRS. M. J. U.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—How can we replace damaged ceiling tiles? A mouse came down from the attic by way of the lighting fixture wires and gnawed two holes in our new ceiling.—MRS. R. L. M.

DEAR POLLY—Mrs. R. L. B. might treat her stained and pitted bathtub which does not respond to cleansers and bleach as we did the tile floor in our shower stall, which now looks like new. Clean thoroughly and sandpaper any parts that are smooth and shiny. Clean again and let thoroughly dry. Apply epoxy enamel to the surface and let dry for several days before using the tub. A second application may be necessary and it should also be left to dry for several days.—MRS. G. L.

DEAR GIRLS—I have never seen a tub that has been so painted but know how satisfactory it is on bathroom tiles and also laminated kitchen counters which looked like new after six months' use.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When we first started to put baby in his walker we had a terrible time keeping him from slumping from one side to another. I discovered that our 4-year-old's ski belt, used for swimming, fit right around the inside of the walker. This gave baby the needed support and ended the slumping problem.—GEORGEANNE

English Muffins

Whether you buy your English muffins fresh or frozen, use a standard or oven toaster, one key to enjoyment is to serve them fresh from the toaster. Top with conventional or far-out toppings. For a quick luncheon or supper Thomas' bakers of specialty products suggest a main dish salad of eggs, meat or fish. Make the salad ahead and chill.

Egg Salad with English Muffins

4 chopped hard cooked eggs
¼ cup real mayonnaise
1½ tablespoons chopped green pepper
1½ tablespoons chopped pimiento
½ teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
4 English muffins
Margarine or butter

Mix eggs, mayonnaise, green pepper, pimiento, mustard, salt and pepper. Chill, if desired. At serving time, split muffins by piercing all round with tines of a fork and gently pulling apart. Toast; spread lightly with margarine. Spoon salad mixture on 4 halves. Serve open faced or closed with other toasted muffin half. Pickles or vegetable relishes go well with the meal.

Tale of Tension

TAKEOVER BID. By Sarah Gainham. Holt, Rinehart. $5.95.

David Leslie was one of those brilliant builders of a business empire who had been driving himself at a furious pace for so long that he finally burned out like a spent rocket.

This novel is the story of Leslie's disintegration, told from the viewpoint of a man who ran "the Chief's" office in Brussels. Leslie arrived in Brussels saturated with alcohol; he was a virtual prisoner of attendants who kept him stuffed with a variety of pills.

There the great tycoon discovered a grubby little female, hardboiled, calculating — Sidney, a temporary clerk in the Brussels office. And suddenly Sidney was queening it around as Leslie's mistress.

Meanwhile the vultures were closing in on Leslie, who was incapable of pulling himself together. His lawyer arrived, primed by Leslie's estranged wife to get the great man put away in a sanatarium.

There is a great deal of tension in this tale, and it is told succinctly.

Miss Gainham is known for her Julia Homburg trilogy, which began with the popular "Night Falls on the City," set in Vienna at the time of World War II. The trilogy was an elaborate, high textured and slowly moving narrative. The present book is entirely different — a sharp change of pace — and much more vivid.

I've really got the Blahs! A new year has just barely begun but already I've noticed some things about myself that just go to show it must be a fast aging year for me. What a scream, I just read my horoscope and it had told me since I was now in the shadow of Jupiter I could expect great things, a new career, lots of money, a fantastic love affair — piddle diddle! All I think Jupiter is doing is leaning on me so heavily he's wearing me out! Why I've discovered just this week fourteen new grey hairs; I've come across the devastating truth that the girdle I wore three years ago (now that the tight skirts have come back into their own), no longer fits the posterior it fit three years ago (obviously it's shrunk from lying in the drawer so long); my skin is drying out so fast these days I have to go to bed at night encased in creamy lotions, and if anyone laid a hand on me I'd probably spurt right out of bed and onto the floor like whip cream in a pastry tube? I'm constantly short winded after climbing stairs or actually walking forward a few steps, or backwards, or sideways; my headaches more (that's not age though, that's just Charles and the fellas); and, I expect to break out in horrid old age spots any day now (that's really what I thought was happening to me back a few weeks ago when I had that pytorosis stuff, except I couldn't figure out why they itched so. Anyway, I'm just gettin to be a mess. I sure wish some of that extra money my horoscope promised me would come along and I'd take it and blow the whole thing on one of those fabulous beauty spas where they lift the drops and drop the neckline, and then watch out world (I'm not sure for what), but watch out anyway!!

Dear Editor:

We were deeply angered by he article and headline printed n the January 29, 1972, edition of your paper, "Teacher Drunk." Each day you print the names and addresses of persons arrested for public drunkenness, but you generally print it under the headline, "Arrests." Yet, in Saturday's edition when the arrest involved a teacher in the New Madrid District, you chose bold headlines on the front page.

Since you printed the occupation of one of the two arrested, why didn't you print he occupation of both? Why not headline all arrests for drunkenness by printing "Farmer Drunk," "Lawyer Drunk," "Editor Drunk," "Parent Drunk," etc.? Why single out one profession?

We feel this article was a deliberate slam on our profession and on our school district. We feel teachers have the same rights as other people and should not be singled out as you did in your paper.

Sincerely yours,
Ann King, Rep.

Soviet Steel Mills Top U.S. For First Time

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — Soviet steel mills outproduced U.S. mills in 1971 for the first time, something no other country has ever done, says the International Affairs Division of the United Steelworkers Union.

Meyer Bernstein, director of the union division, said Wednesday the latest figures compiled by the union showed Soviet steel production in 1971 to be 132.8 million tons. U.S. steel output in 1971 was an estimated 120 million tons.

The Soviet figure had not been totally unexpected, Bernstein said.

The Soviet figure had not been totally unexpected, Bernstein said.

GOING WHOLE HOG, a butcher in Rome leaves no doubt as to his stock since much of it is on display above his door.

FLAT TIRE would mean a very big job if it ever occurred on one of the world's largest trucks. a 200-ton dump. The tire alone is 11½ feet high and weighs 7,000 pounds.

BASE BRANCHING

The more branches a plant has from the base, the longer the flower stems will be.

When you read a description of a plant in a catalog or magazine or newspaper and the words "base branching" are used to describe it, what do these words mean to you?

They're important because the plant that branches from the base, where it grows from the soil, has longer flower stems for more usable cut flowers.

Instead of a single stem growing upright, then branching above ground, there are several to many stems all growing right from ground level. This usually means more flowers as well as longer stems.

All of this is of great interest to people who grow cut flowers for profit.

But it ought also to make the gardener think twice if he wishes to cut and use blossoms from the garden in the house.

Practically always there will be a statement in the description of a variety of plant to show it branches from the ground.

If nothing is said, then you can assume that the plant has a single stem and branches grow from this.

BASE BRANCHING

The more branches a plant has from the base, the longer the flower stems will be.

When you read a description of a plant in a catalog or magazine or newspaper and the words "base branching" are used to describe it, what do these words mean to you?

They're important because the plant that branches from the base, where it grows from the soil, has longer flower stems for more usable cut flowers.

Instead of a single stem growing upright, then branching above ground, there are several to many stems all growing right from ground level. This usually means more flowers as well as longer stems.

All of this is of great interest to people who grow cut flowers for profit.

But it ought also to make the gardener think twice if he wishes to cut and use blossoms from the garden in the house.

Practically always there will be a statement in the description of a variety of plant to show it branches from the ground.

If nothing is said, then you can assume that the plant has a single stem and branches grow from this.

SAN ANTONIO -- Airman Jerry D. Acord, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alferd A. Acord of 213 W. Market, Dexter, Mo., has completed his U.S. Air Force basic training at the Air Training Command's Lackland AFB, Tex. He has been assigned to Chanute AFB, Ill., for training in the aircraft equipment maintenance field. Airman Acord is a 1970 graduate of Dexter Senior High School. His wife, Phyllis, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Barber, Rt. 1, Essex, Mo.

Consumer Career Considered

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — U.S. Sen. Fred R. Harris said Monday he is considering a consumer-oriented career, somewhat like Ralph Nader, but with more of a political slant, when his term in the Senate expires next January.

The Lawton Democrat, who gave up his re-election plans last year to make an abortive bid for the Democratic presidential nomination, stressed once again that his decision to leave the Senate "is final."

Harris, sporting a mustache and a mod hair style, said he and his wife, LaDonna, "are going to do a good deal of writing" after he leaves the Senate. He said he has contracted to write a book on "The New Populism."

"I do not want to practice law in the conventional sensen " he said, "but there is a possibility we will open a law office that could be a little more socially active."

Asked to elaborate, he said most "regulatory agencies in this country are dominated by those they are supposed to regulate."

He said he might combat this by filing citizens' actions ... "in Oklahoma, for example, people are paying way too much money for insurance, way too much money for telephone serve."

Asked if he meant he might consider a consumer advocacy group such as that headed by Nader, Harris replied, "Yes, something like that." But he said he would center more on agencies that are political in nature.

Harris said he will continue to make Oklahoma his home, "but we may wind up opening a Washington law office temporarily."

He said he won't take an active part in the campaign here to elect his successor, "but I might speak out on issues from time to time."

He said he also plans to remain neutral in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination. "I don't plan too endorse a candidate before the convention," Harris said.

Plans to set up "a citizens board of inquiry to the redistribution of wealth and power" are occuping him now, Harris said, adding that he will have some announcements about that in the future. He said his activity in that area will limit his political involvement outside the Senate this year.

Asked if he could support any or all of the Democrats that are running, Harris said, "I could support most of them. I think most of them would be an improvement over President Nixon."

Bank Rescue Loan Approved By FDIC

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has approved a $60-million loan to rescue the Bank of the Commonwealth in Detroit, one of the nation's largest banks.

The FDIC made the announcement at a news conference and said the bank, with deposits of over $1 billion, was in danger of failure without the federal assistance program.

According to Frank Wille, the FDIC chairman, the bank would not be expected to take all of the $60-million loan, which would be for five years and repayable to the government at 5.5 per cent interest.

In his introduction, he quotes Henry Ward Beecher:

To which Thorne adds: "If no liars were round the world would be flat."

He might have included, from Oliver Wendell Holmes, "Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle which fits them all," or Pierre Bayle, "If an historian were to relate truthfully all the crimes, weakness and disorders of mankind, his readers would take his work for satire rather than for history."

Antics Of Jet Stream Cause Erratic Weather

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unusual antics of the jet stream, a meandering, 300-mile-an-hour river of air coursing miles above the earth, are primarily responsible for the nation's erratic weather this winter, according to government meteorologists.

They say the jet stream, which hasn't behaved in its current manner for 20 years, accounts for such unlikely winter weather as:

—Frequent unseasonably warm weather in the eastern third of the nation; unusually cold weather in the western third; erratic changes in weather in the remaining third.

—What might be called reversed vertical weather, a frequent occurrence this season. The dividing line for cold and warm weather often has run in a roughly vertical pattern, more or less along the Mississippi River. ,In other winters, the line usually runs horizontally, separating north and south.

—Relatively rapid changes in temperature for short periods of time, mostly in the Midwestern states. Examples are a 72degree drop in temperature to 20 below zero in the Indianapolis area during 72 hours and a 33-degree drop to 13 below zero in the Duluth, Minnm, area during 18 hours.

Resulting oddities during the fall and winter have ranged from circus elephants suffering frostbitten ears and feet in a major October snowstorm in Wyoming to the sudden blooming of Japanese cherry trees during the Christmas season in Washington.

Scientists at the National Weather Service say the jet stream, a major factor in determining weather at earth's surface, has upset usual winter patterns because it is north of its normal position as it passes high above the eastern and southern parts of the nation. The result is unusually warm temperatures so far in these areas.

At the same time, the stream has been south of its normal course as it moves over the western United States.

Another weather factor, interplaying with the off-course jet stream, has been extremely cold surface air over Canada and Alaska these past few months.

The frigid air, 15 degrees colder than normal, at times has been sucked southweard more quickly than usual by weather processes linked with the jet stream. This largely accounts for the rather sudden drops in temperature in some areas.

Meteorologists describe the jet stream as a 100-mile mass of rapidly moving air that whirls west to east around the Northern Hemisphere at an altitude of four to seven miles.

Characterized by huge dips and rises, it controls the pattern and direction of the earth's storm tracks, intermittent areas of low pressure that tend to produce rainy or snowy weather.

Giving details on what's been happening since October, meteorologist James Wagner of the weather service said that in an ordinary winter the jet stream passes relatively close to the Gulf and Atlantic Coasts.

The warm air it sucks northward from the Gulf travels a relatively short distance before it hits larger amounts of cold air sucked down from the northm This situation results in snowy or cold weather over the midwestern and northeastern United States.

This winter, however, the jet stream has passed cfarther north over the Gulf and Atlantic Coasts. The warm Gulf air has been pulled much farther northward into midwestern and eastern areas before colliding with the cold air. l

"So," Wagner said, "this winter, storms originating along the Gulf Coast have been almost completely absent. Moreover, storms originating in or near the Rockies have been deflected farther north than usual because of the unusual configuration of the jet stream.

"These latter storm tracks have tended to move more toward the northern Great Lakes as contrasted with their usual winter pattern of moving through the lower Great Lakes and out through the St. Lawrence Valley."

Wagner said the last time the nation had a similarly erratic winter was in 1951-52. The winters of 1948-49 and 1949-50 also had the same odd pattern, and prior to those, the winter of 1882-83.

He said this year's so-called vertical weather—warm east, cold west—was highly unusual. The tendency during the past 10 years, Wagner said, has been just the opposite—abnormally cold in the east and abnormally warm in the west.

How long will the present situation last?

"It's hard to say," Wagner said. "Our records of the few winters of this exact type indicate that sometimes a change comes in February, sometimes in March, sometimes in April."

Also, he said, there's no way of predicting whether things will be different next fall and winter.

What accounts for shifts in the jet stream?

Wagner said there's been "a large area of very warm water in the Central Pacific throughout all of last fall and so far this winter.

"According to the theory of Dr. Jerome Namias, retired director of our extended forecast section, this could result in the kind of jet stream pattern we are seeing at present.

"According to this theory, this very warm water heats the lower atmosphere to a higher temperature than normal over that part of the Pacific—resulting in a northerly deflection of the jet stream as it courses that area of the ocean.

"Finally, the theory goes, this would result in the kinds of deflections occurring now in the jet stream as it passes over the United States." c

Reform Is Attacked

WASHINGTON (AP) — A widely hailed reform in House voting procedures has come under attack from senior members who plan to try to dilute it at a Democratic party caucus next month.

The reform, which puts members on record for the first time when voting on amendments offered on the House floor, went into effect a year ago, and supporters hailed it as the most significant change in procedures in 50 years.

During its year of operation, it has produced a record number of votes, greatly increased participation in voting on amendments, led to notable triumphs by the rank-and-file over the leadership of both parties, and angered a lot of oldtimers for those very reasons.

The procedure, known as a recorded teller vote, can now be used when 20 members request it. A move is under way to increase the required number to 30, 40 or 50.

The effort is being made quietly through conversations behind the smokers' rail in the House chamber and in the cloakrooms, with no one openly campaigning for the change.

Reps. Thomas P. O'Neil Jr., D-Mass., the Democratic whip, and Charles S. Gubser, R-Calif., original sponsors of the reform, have sent a letter to all members saying they have received a lot of complaints about the way it is working and soliciting ideas for changes. But they made no recommendations.

The inherent distaste of most politicians for taking public stands on controversial issues accounts for the major opposition to the recorded teller vote.

Stock Analyst Thinks $5 A Week Investor Can Succeed

AP Business Analyst 8NEW YORK (AP) — Can the small investor who is barely able to set aside $5 a week actually make money in the stock market? Or will the high commissions and the market's volatility make him a loser?

Many thousands of Americans are living evidence that it is easier to lose than win in stocks, which makes the view of George Nicholson especially interesting and potentially profitable.

"I'm convinced," says Nicholson, "it is possible for people to achieve a goal of $20,0p0 invested in stocks in a 20-to 30year period by budgeting $2p to $25 a month for such a purpose." l c

Nicholson, research partner in a Detroit brokerage firm, happens also to be a member of the advisory board of the National Association of Investment Clubs, which perhaps would tend to color his opinion.

He was, however, giving more than a mere opinion for the record—he was speaking of the record. NAIC members have averaged nearly 15 per cent a year over their lifetimes, a record professional investors would love to match.

Nicholson gave his views as the NAIC released its latest survey of club performance. It was conducted from April 1970 to April 1971, during which the clubs averaged gains of 37.5 per cent, a figure that exceeded most of the popular indices and averages and which was better than most mutual funds.

The organization is made up of 12,500 clubs with an average membership of about 13.

Because of the instruction they receive, club members are less inclined to panic, as do many small investors. During the past two years, when many stocks were greatly underpriced, clubs built up their portfolios.

What are the secrets? None. Says Nicholson: "Investment clubs which succeed are the ones which follow our philosophy that investing is a ongterm proposition."

From the beginning of NAIC, he says, clubs have observed three guiding principles:

1. Invest every month, regardless of what the market does. s
2. Re-invest all dividends.
3. Buy growth companies.

Successful clubs, Nicholson explains, do not look for signals in day-to-day market moves, and they ignore the peaks and valleys of the traditional market cindicatorsm clnstead, they study the fundamentals cand keep coolm c c c

When is the time to begin an investment club? ' Now," says Nicholson. s

"You can't put off waiting for ideal conditions. There is always uncertainty. Usually the more uncertainty there is, the best stock prices are for longterm investment. '

The most dangerous time to begin a club, he says, "is when all stocks are going up every day." Nicholson has observed that a club formed under such conditions or to take advantage of them is poorly prepared when the tide turns. Often it will break up.

Q—When was the first National League-American League World Series played?

A—In 1903, at Boston, Mass.

Visions From A Designer

NEW YORK (AP) — How would you like to store your ice cubes in a refrigerator made of dried leaves and old newspapers; listen to a nine-cent radio made from an old juice can and, if you go to the hospital, use a clear, vinyl inflatable bed-pan?

That's the vision of Victor Papanek, a dapper, mustached industrial designer who doesn't believe in patents or the traditional aesthetic values of his profession. Specifically, he says that designers should become more socially responsible and teach ghetto dwellers that "design belongs to them—not to the people who make things."

Papanek, dean of the School of Design at the California Institute of the Arts, held up a square "sandwich" of alternating layers of compressed leaves and dried newspapers.

"We call it 'Fiberleaves,'" he said. "It does the same insulation job as styrofoam, but it's biodegradable, costs nothing to make but the labor, and is coated with silicone to make it last longer."

His inflatable bedpan,deflated, looks like a double slab of see-through vinyl.

"Regular steel bed-pans are hard to sterilize, bulky to store and expensive to purchase," he explained. "This one, which we've just developed, can be slipped under the patient without disruption, then blown up for use. It makes no clanking noise and it can be boiled. We're also thinking about making it disposable," he said.

So far, both the bed-pan and the fiberleaves are in the experimental stage.

His attitude, and a description of the nine-cent radio for Third World use, comprise the basis of Papanek's new book, "Design for the Real World," a rallying cry to make the designer consider the public. Papanek says that designers should stop wasting their time on such reckless items as parakeet diapers, 14-karat gold toilet seats, lighters that look like cars and cars that kill you.

And he charges that design discriminates against poor people, sick people, women, children, Negroes, southpaws, or men at least an inch above or below six feet tall.

"We're all handicapped, all of us who aren't middle-income white males exactly six feet tall and weighing 185 pounds," he said. "Because when you look up designers' statistics on human factors, they are almost all derived from Army and Air Force males."

As a result, he said, many items are designed without the real user's needs or problems in mind.

Makers of pill boxes, Papanek says don't take into consideration the curiosity of young children and the boxes become deadly "pill vaults." He's designed a tamper-proof version which requires the more mature skill of lining up two points to open the box.

Papanek says that designers of kitchen stoves have also ignored the danger of tiny, prying fingers. Chilren reach up to the colorful back panel to turn them, then fall on the heating elements. Papnek suggests a more complicated system of control which would require punching two knobs at once— like a tape recorder.

Moreover, he says, due to bad design, people in wheelchairs can't use telephone booths; youngsters can cut their fingers on the sharp paper edges of picture books.

As for lefthanders:

"There are left-handed checkbooks, but no left-handed unemployment compensation books. So if you have money, lefthandedness is cool: if not. no."

The Prayer
from
The Upper Room

Three times I besought the Lord about this, that it should leave me; but he said to me, "My grace is sufficient for you, for my power is made perfect.

Prayer: Teach us, O God, not to make excuses because of handicaps we have. Help us to push hard, doing what we can do, knowing that Thou canst use it to accomplish what is needed. In Jesus ' name. Amen.

What's The Law

Character Not Shown

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

When dog-face Dan was mustered out of the Army, he couldn't have had more medals on his chest had he won every prize at a dog show. And, when he was charged with having committed a murder, several months later, he stood up in court and proudly pointed to one of his many madals, which he had polished up for the occasion, to refute the accusation that he had committed so unsocialble an act. Specifically, he pointed to his glistening Good Conduct Medal.

"If that doesn't show what a nice guy I am," he told the judge, "then the Army is no judge of character."

"The Army isn't in the business of judging character,' responded the district attorney. "It's in the business of fighting wars. Consequently, a Good Conduct Medal, no matter how highly polished it may be, can tell us no more about an accused murderer than can the corpse he's accused of murdering. Thus, the medal can't be used as evidence."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit the glistening Good Conduct Medal to be used as evidence of Dan's good character and reputation?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that evidence of an accused person's good character can be demonstrated only by proof of his reputation, at the time of the offense, in the community where he is known for the specific trait involved in the crime. In other words, noted the judge, if a person is charged with murder in a specific community, his reputation in that community for gentleness and being cool. calm and collected, as example, would be admissable to show a character unlikely to commit murder. A Good Conduct Medal issued by the Army, concluded the judge, doesn't meet the evidentiary requirements.(Based upon a 1967 New Jersey Supreme Court Decision) (A Bell-McClure Syndicate Feature)

—Frequent unseasonably warm weather in the eastern third of the nation; unusually cold weather in the western third; erratic changes in weather in the remaining third.

—What might be called reversed vertical weather, a frequent occurrence this season. The dividing line for cold and warm weather often has run in a roughly vertical pattern, more or less along the Mississippi River. ,In other winters, the line usually runs horizontally, separating north and south.

—Relatively rapid changes in temperature for short periods of time, mostly in the Midwestern states. Examples are a 72degree drop in temperature to 20 below zero in the Indianapolis area during 72 hours and a 33-degree drop to 13 below zero in the Duluth, Minnm, area during 18 hours.

Resulting oddities during the fall and winter have ranged from circus elephants suffering frostbitten ears and feet in a major October snowstorm in Wyoming to the sudden blooming of Japanese cherry trees during the Christmas season in Washington.

Scientists at the National Weather Service say the jet stream, a major factor in determining weather at earth's surface, has upset usual winter patterns because it is north of its normal position as it passes high above the eastern and southern parts of the nation. The result is unusually warm temperatures so far in these areas.

At the same time, the stream has been south of its normal course as it moves over the western United States.

Another weather factor, interplaying with the off-course jet stream, has been extremely cold surface air over Canada and Alaska these past few months.

The frigid air, 15 degrees colder than normal, at times has been sucked southweard more quickly than usual by weather processes linked with the jet stream. This largely accounts for the rather sudden drops in temperature in some areas.

Meteorologists describe the jet stream as a 100-mile mass of rapidly moving air that whirls west to east around the Northern Hemisphere at an altitude of four to seven miles.

Characterized by huge dips and rises, it controls the pattern and direction of the earth's storm tracks, intermittent areas of low pressure that tend to produce rainy or snowy weather.

Giving details on what's been happening since October, meteorologist James Wagner of the weather service said that in an ordinary winter the jet stream passes relatively close to the Gulf and Atlantic Coasts.

The warm air it sucks northward from the Gulf travels a relatively short distance before it hits larger amounts of cold air sucked down from the northm This situation results in snowy or cold weather over the midwestern and northeastern United States.

This winter, however, the jet stream has passed cfarther north over the Gulf and Atlantic Coasts. The warm Gulf air has been pulled much farther northward into midwestern and eastern areas before colliding with the cold air. l

"So," Wagner said, "this winter, storms originating along the Gulf Coast have been almost completely absent. Moreover, storms originating in or near the Rockies have been deflected farther north than usual because of the unusual configuration of the jet stream.

"These latter storm tracks have tended to move more toward the northern Great Lakes as contrasted with their usual winter pattern of moving through the lower Great Lakes and out through the St. Lawrence Valley."

Wagner said the last time the nation had a similarly erratic winter was in 1951-52. The winters of 1948-49 and 1949-50 also had the same odd pattern, and prior to those, the winter of 1882-83.

He said this year's so-called vertical weather—warm east, cold west—was highly unusual. The tendency during the past 10 years, Wagner said, has been just the opposite—abnormally cold in the east and abnormally warm in the west.

How long will the present situation last?

"It's hard to say," Wagner said. "Our records of the few winters of this exact type indicate that sometimes a change comes in February, sometimes in March, sometimes in April."

Also, he said, there's no way of predicting whether things will be different next fall and winter.

What accounts for shifts in the jet stream?

Wagner said there's been "a large area of very warm water in the Central Pacific throughout all of last fall and so far this winter.

"According to the theory of Dr. Jerome Namias, retired director of our extended forecast section, this could result in the kind of jet stream pattern we are seeing at present.

"According to this theory, this very warm water heats the lower atmosphere to a higher temperature than normal over that part of the Pacific—resulting in a northerly deflection of the jet stream as it courses that area of the ocean.

"Finally, the theory goes, this would result in the kinds of deflections occurring now in the jet stream as it passes over the United States." c

Reform Is Attacked

WASHINGTON (AP) — A widely hailed reform in House voting procedures has come under attack from senior members who plan to try to dilute it at a Democratic party caucus next month.

The reform, which puts members on record for the first time when voting on amendments offered on the House floor, went into effect a year ago, and supporters hailed it as the most significant change in procedures in 50 years.

During its year of operation, it has produced a record number of votes, greatly increased participation in voting on amendments, led to notable triumphs by the rank-and-file over the leadership of both parties, and angered a lot of oldtimers for those very reasons.

The procedure, known as a recorded teller vote, can now be used when 20 members request it. A move is under way to increase the required number to 30, 40 or 50.

The effort is being made quietly through conversations behind the smokers' rail in the House chamber and in the cloakrooms, with no one openly campaigning for the change.

Reps. Thomas P. O'Neil Jr., D-Mass., the Democratic whip, and Charles S. Gubser, R-Calif., original sponsors of the reform, have sent a letter to all members saying they have received a lot of complaints about the way it is working and soliciting ideas for changes. But they made no recommendations.

The inherent distaste of most politicians for taking public stands on controversial issues accounts for the major opposition to the recorded teller vote.

Stock Analyst Thinks $5 A Week Investor Can Succeed

AP Business Analyst 8NEW YORK (AP) — Can the small investor who is barely able to set aside $5 a week actually make money in the stock market? Or will the high commissions and the market's volatility make him a loser?

Many thousands of Americans are living evidence that it is easier to lose than win in stocks, which makes the view of George Nicholson especially interesting and potentially profitable.

"I'm convinced," says Nicholson, "it is possible for people to achieve a goal of $20,0p0 invested in stocks in a 20-to 30year period by budgeting $2p to $25 a month for such a purpose." l c

Nicholson, research partner in a Detroit brokerage firm, happens also to be a member of the advisory board of the National Association of Investment Clubs, which perhaps would tend to color his opinion.

He was, however, giving more than a mere opinion for the record—he was speaking of the record. NAIC members have averaged nearly 15 per cent a year over their lifetimes, a record professional investors would love to match.

Nicholson gave his views as the NAIC released its latest survey of club performance. It was conducted from April 1970 to April 1971, during which the clubs averaged gains of 37.5 per cent, a figure that exceeded most of the popular indices and averages and which was better than most mutual funds.

The organization is made up of 12,500 clubs with an average membership of about 13.

Because of the instruction they receive, club members are less inclined to panic, as do many small investors. During the past two years, when many stocks were greatly underpriced, clubs built up their portfolios.

What are the secrets? None. Says Nicholson: "Investment clubs which succeed are the ones which follow our philosophy that investing is a ongterm proposition."

From the beginning of NAIC, he says, clubs have observed three guiding principles:

1. Invest every month, regardless of what the market does. s
2. Re-invest all dividends.
3. Buy growth companies.

Successful clubs, Nicholson explains, do not look for signals in day-to-day market moves, and they ignore the peaks and valleys of the traditional market cindicatorsm cInstead, they study the fundamentals cand keep coolm c c c

When is the time to begin an investment club? ' Now," says Nicholson. s

"You can't put off waiting for ideal conditions. There is always uncertainty. Usually the more uncertainty there is, the best stock prices are for longterm investment. '

The most dangerous time to begin a club, he says, "is when all stocks are going up every day." Nicholson has observed that a club formed under such conditions or to take advantage of them is poorly prepared when the tide turns. Often it will break up.

Q—When was the first National League-American League World Series played?

A—In 1903, at Boston, Mass.

Visions From A Designer

NEW YORK (AP) — How would you like to store your ice cubes in a refrigerator made of dried leaves and old newspapers; listen to a nine-cent radio made from an old juice can and, if you go to the hospital, use a clear, vinyl inflatable bed-pan?

That's the vision of Victor Papanek, a dapper, mustached industrial designer who doesn't believe in patents or the traditional aesthetic values of his profession. Specifically, he says that designers should become more socially responsible and teach ghetto dwellers that "design belongs to them—not to the people who make things."

Papanek, dean of the School of Design at the California Institute of the Arts, held up a square "sandwich" of alternating layers of compressed leaves and dried newspapers.

"We call it 'Fiberleaves,'" he said. "It does the same insulation job as styrofoam, but it's biodegradable, costs nothing to make but the labor, and is coated with silicone to make it last longer."

His inflatable bedpan,deflated, looks like a double slab of see-through vinyl.

"Regular steel bed-pans are hard to sterilize, bulky to store and expensive to purchase," he explained. "This one, which we've just developed, can be slipped under the patient without disruption, then blown up for use. It makes no clanking noise and it can be boiled. We're also thinking about making it disposable," he said.

So far, both the bed-pan and the fiberleaves are in the experimental stage.

His attitude, and a description of the nine-cent radio for Third World use, comprise the basis of Papanek's new book, "Design for the Real World," a rallying cry to make the designer consider the public. Papanek says that designers should stop wasting their time on such reckless items as parakeet diapers, 14-karat gold toilet seats, lighters that look like cars and cars that kill you.

And he charges that design discriminates against poor people, sick people, women, children, Negroes, southpaws, or men at least an inch above or below six feet tall.

"We're all handicapped, all of us who aren't middle-income white males exactly six feet tall and weighing 185 pounds," he said. "Because when you look up designers' statistics on human factors, they are almost all derived from Army and Air Force males."

As a result, he said, many items are designed without the real user's needs or problems in mind.

Makers of pill boxes, Papanek says don't take into consideration the curiosity of young children and the boxes become deadly "pill vaults." He's designed a tamper-proof version which requires the more mature skill of lining up two points to open the box.

Papanek says that designers of kitchen stoves have also ignored the danger of tiny, prying fingers. Chilren reach up to the colorful back panel to turn them, then fall on the heating elements. Papnek suggests a more complicated system of control which would require punching two knobs at once— like a tape recorder.

Moreover, he says, due to bad design, people in wheelchairs can't use telephone booths; youngsters can cut their fingers on the sharp paper edges of picture books.

As for lefthanders:

"There are left-handed checkbooks, but no left-handed unemployment compensation books. So if you have money, lefthandedness is cool: if not, no."

The Prayer from The Upper Room

Three times I besought the Lord about this, that it should leave me; but he said to me, "My grace is sufficient for you, for my power is made perfect.

Prayer: Teach us, O God, not to make excuses because of handicaps we have. Help us to push hard, doing what we can do, knowing that Thou canst use it to accomplish what is needed. In Jesus ' name. Amen.

What's The Law

Character Not Shown

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

When dog-face Dan was mustered out of the Army, he couldn't have had more medals on his chest had he won every prize at a dog show. And, when he was charged with having committed a murder, several months later, he stood up in court and proudly pointed to one of his many madals, which he had polished up for the occasion, to refute the accusation that he had committed so unsocialble an act. Specifically, he pointed to his glistening Good Conduct Medal.

"If that doesn't show what a nice guy I am," he told the judge, "then the Army is no judge of character."

"The Army isn't in the business of judging character,' responded the district attorney. "It's in the business of fighting wars. Consequently, a Good Conduct Medal, no matter how highly polished it may be, can tell us no more about an accused murderer than can the corpse he's accused of murdering. Thus, the medal can't be used as evidence."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you permit the glistening Good Conduct Medal to be used as evidence of Dan's good character and reputation?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that evidence of an accused person's good character can be demonstrated only by proof of his reputation, at the time of the offense, in the community where he is known for the specific trait involved in the crime. In other words, noted the judge, if a person is charged with murder in a specific community, his reputation in that community for gentleness and being cool. calm and collected, as example, would be admissable to show a character unlikely to commit murder. A Good Conduct Medal issued by the Army, concluded the judge, doesn't meet the evidentiary requirements.(Based upon a 1967 New Jersey Supreme Court Decision) (A Bell-McClure Syndicate Feature)

ICC Orders Rail Merger Postponed

WASHINGTON (AP) I The Interstate Commerce Commission ordered the indefinite postponement Monday of the merger of the Illinois Central Railroad with Gulf, Mobile and Ohio Railroad, scheduled to take effect Tuesday.

The merger has been delayed until petitions from the Kansas City Southern lines, the Missouri Pacific and the Chicago and Northwestern Railroads can be disposed of.

In an 11th hour maneuver last Wednesday, the railroads filed complaints to block the scheduled merger, approved by the ICC in late December.

The railroads said the merger would increase the competitive advantage of the combined Illinois Central-Gulf to the detriment of the complaining carriers.

The Missouri Pacific said in a statement filed with the ICC the commission should require the Union Pacific to divest itself of its stock in Illinois Central Inudstries, parent corporation of the Illinois Central Railroad, within one year of the merger. The Union Pacific reportedly owns 16 per cent of the stock in ICI which is held in trust. It has agreed to sell its interests within 10 years of the merger.

Gideon Men Arrested

MALDEN — Three Gideon men were arrested yesterday in connection with the shooting of six head of black angus cattle on a farm near Malden last Wednesday.

Dunklin County Deputy Sheriff Bob McDonald said James Lewis Woollums, 40, his brother, William Doyle Woollums, 44, and Bobby Wayne White, 34, all of Gideon, were arrested Tuesday in the Gideon area. Assisting in the arrests were New Madrid deputies Willis Wingo and Alfred Scott and Trooper Gene Duckworth of the Missouri Highway Patrol.

McDonald said the arrests came after an intensive investigation over the weekend. Around 4 a.m. on Jan. 26 six head of black Angus cattle on the Bobby Bennett farm, west of Malden, were shot, McDonald said. A nearby farmer observed a truck leaving the farm shortly after the shots were heard.

McDonald said five Angus were shot and left on the ground, apparently because they were too large to move. A sixth Angus was shot and taken home by the thieves, where it was later butchered.

No charges against the suspects have been filed. pending a review of the case by Prosecuting Attorney Charles Baker.

The petition states that no employes are engaged in any labor dispute with any union and in particular with Local 513; that the picketing is not for the purpose of giving publicity to any labor dispute existing between Universal Tank and Iron Works, Inc., and Local 513, but for the purpose of interfering with and obstructing the job operation and preventing their union employes from entering upon the work site, knowing that the employes of the Universal Tank and Iron Works, Inc., who are members of the labor union will refuse to cross the picket lines, thereby illegally interfering with the construction of the elevated tank and contractual relationship between the company and its employes.

Each petetioner has posted $1,000 injunction bond on condition they will abide by the order of the court and pay all damages and costs that may adjudged against them in the event the restraining order is dissolved.

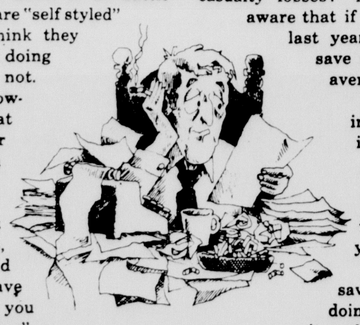
An important message for people who prepare their own income tax returns.

Maybe you've been cheating yourself all these years.

Every year, between January and April, millions of people sit down to do battle with Uncle Sam. Some are "self styled" accountants. Others think they can save a few dollars doing it themselves—so why not.

The sad truth is, however, no matter what their reason was for starting, many of them end the same. On the short end.



You see, when it comes to income taxes, amateurs should depend on H&R Block. We have all the facilities to help you make "income tax time" a pleasant experience. To begin with, H&R Block now has over 6,000 conveniently located offices manned by thousands of specially trained personnel who are anxious to help you. They'll sit you down over a free cup of coffee and show you some things about your income tax that you might never have known existed. For example, do you know all about deductions for child care or casualty losses? And maybe you aren't aware that if your income increased last year, you may be able to save tax dollars by "income averaging."

Well, when it comes to income taxes, H&R Block is aware of just about everything because we're a company that eats, sleeps, and drinks tax returns 365 days a year.

Yes, maybe you can save a couple of bucks by doing your own return but it really may be costing you a lot more by not having your return done by H&R Block.

DON'T LET AN AMATEUR DO H&R BLOCK'S JOB.

ICC Orders Rail Merger Postponed

WASHINGTON (AP) I The Interstate Commerce Commission ordered the indefinite postponement Monday of the merger of the Illinois Central Railroad with Gulf, Mobile and Ohio Railroad, scheduled to take effect Tuesday.

The merger has been delayed until petitions from the Kansas City Southern lines, the Missouri Pacific and the Chicago and Northwestern Railroads can be disposed of.

In an 11th hour maneuver last Wednesday, the railroads filed complaints to block the scheduled merger, approved by the ICC in late December.

The railroads said the merger would increase the competitive advantage of the combined Illinois Central-Gulf to the detriment of the complaining carriers.

The Missouri Pacific said in a statement filed with the ICC the commission should require the Union Pacific to divest itself of its stock in Illinois Central Inudstries, parent corporation of the Illinois Central Railroad, within one year of the merger. The Union Pacific reportedly owns 16 per cent of the stock in ICI which is held in trust. It has agreed to sell its interests within 10 years of the merger.

Gideon Men Arrested

MALDEN — Three Gideon men were arrested yesterday in connection with the shooting of six head of black angus cattle on a farm near Malden last Wednesday.

Dunklin County Deputy Sheriff Bob McDonald said James Lewis Woollums, 40, his brother, William Doyle Woollums, 44, and Bobby Wayne White, 34, all of Gideon, were arrested Tuesday in the Gideon area. Assisting in the arrests were New Madrid deputies Willis Wingo and Alfred Scott and Trooper Gene Duckworth of the Missouri Highway Patrol.

McDonald said the arrests came after an intensive investigation over the weekend. Around 4 a.m. on Jan. 26 six head of black Angus cattle on the Bobby Bennett farm, west of Malden, were shot, McDonald said. A nearby farmer observed a truck leaving the farm shortly after the shots were heard.

McDonald said five Angus were shot and left on the ground, apparently because they were too large to move. A sixth Angus was shot and taken home by the thieves, where it was later butchered.

No charges against the suspects have been filed. pending a review of the case by Prosecuting Attorney Charles Baker.

An important message for people who prepare their own income tax returns.

Maybe you've been cheating yourself all these years.

Every year, between January and April, millions of people sit down to do battle with Uncle Sam. Some are "self styled" accountants. Others think they can save a few dollars doing it themselves—so why not.

The sad truth is, however, no matter what their reason was for starting, many of them end the same. On the short end.

You see, when it comes to income taxes, amateurs should depend on H&R Block. We have all the facilities to help you make "income tax time" a pleasant experience. To begin with, H&R Block now has over 6,000 conveniently located offices manned by thousands of specially trained personnel who are anxious to help you. They'll sit you down over a free cup of coffee and show you some things about your income tax that you might never have known existed. For example, do you know all about deductions for child care or casualty losses? And maybe you aren't aware that if your income increased last year, you may be able to save tax dollars by "income averaging."

Well, when it comes to income taxes, H&R Block is aware of just about everything because we're a company that eats, sleeps, and drinks tax returns 365 days a year.

Yes, maybe you can save a couple of bucks by doing your own return but it really may be costing you a lot more by not having your return done by H&R Block.

DON'T LET AN AMATEUR DO H&R BLOCK'S JOB.

Rebels Gun Down Jays

ESSEX — Spewing, sputtering and then unleashing a devastating attack, the fabuleous Richland high school Rebel basketball team stormed to their 21st win of the season against no defeats Tuesday night and held up to their stiffest test of the campaign in disposing of class L power, Charleston, 79-68.

Coach Larry Joplin's cagers took care of the Bluejay visitors with a big 25 point offensive explosion in the fourth quarter after CHS had led since late in the first period.

John Sims and Norman Cole teamed for 40 points, ripping in 23 and 17 respectively, to head up the RHS offense which got 14 big markers from reserve Rodney Keller.

Charleston jumped out to a 21-19 lead in the first period and opened up an nine point buldge in the second quarter before the Rebs closed to six, 41-35 at half. Richland trimmed three points off that margin with a 19-16 third quarter advantage before kicking its offense into high gear and running up a 25-11 advantage through the final eight minutes of action.

Richland built its 11 point verdict at the free throw line late in the game as Charleston went for the ball in hopes of closing the lead after the Rebs took the advantage midway in the period.

Alvin Pierce scored 17 points to head up coach Lucian Black's offense which included five players in double figures. Albri Cassell and Dan Smith scored 11 each while Larry Lawrence and Mike Gordon added 10 each.

Charleston shellacked the Rebels last season 105-60. Richland went undefeated after that point until the quarterfinals of the state Class M tournament when Fredericktown edged the Rebs and went on to place second in the state event.

Backs Top Pick

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Running backs were the first choices of the St. Louis Cardinals and the Kansas City Chiefs in professional football's annual draft of senior collegians Tuesday.

The Cards, picking fourth, took Oregon's Bobby Moore, a 6-foot-2, 212-pounder, regarded by many scouts as the best running prospect available this year. Club sources say Moore probably has a better chance as a wide receiver.

The Chiefs selected Jeff Kinney, holder of Nebraska's rushing records. "We feel extremely fortunate," said Kansas City Coach Hank Stram of Kinney's availability so late in the round.

Because of trades the Chiefs didn't get another turn until the fourth round when they took Andy Hamilton, a wide receiver from Louisiana State. "We were very lucky he was available," a club spokesman said.

In the ensuing rounds Kansas City gave the nod to Milt Davis, University of Texas defensive end, John Kahler, Long Beach State defensive end, and Dean Carlson, Iowa State quarterback.

St. Louis chose Conrad Dobler, Wyoming guard, Don Heater, Montana Tech running back, and Council Rudolph, Kentucky State defensive end.

Steelers Select MU Star

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Lincoln won't be big enough to hold me tonight," said Nebraska quarterback Jerry Tagge after learning the Green Bay Packers, his hometown team, made him their No. 1 draft choice in professional football's annual draft Tuesday.

Tagge was one of three members of the Cornhuskers, the nation's top college team, to go in the first round. All received the word of their selection while in Washington visiting President Nixon at the White House.

Tagge said playing with the Packers was his dream "since I was a little boy" and told of how he sold popcorn and hot dogs at the Packers' stadium when he was younger.

Other Cornhuskers to go on the first round were Jeff Kinney, a running back picked by Kansas City, and Larry Jacobson, a defensive lineman spoken for by the New York Giants.

Herb Orvis, a defensive lineman from Colorado, also went in the opening round when he was selected by Detroit.

Jack Mildren, Oklahoma quarterback, was the secondround choice of Baltimore, which said the Sooner ace would be given a chance at defensive back.

In the fourth round Pittsburgh tabbed Lorenzo Brinkley, Missouri defensive back, and Oakland chose Cliff Branch, Colorado wide receiver.

Fifth-round selections included Bill Butler, Kansas running back, by New Orleans on a trade with the Packers, and Carl Johnson, Cornhusker tackle, also by New Orleans.

The play-for-pay teams bypassed the conference in the sixth round but four Big Eight players received the nod in the seventh round, the final of the day.

Cincinnati took Steve Conley, Kansas running back, Pittsburgh selected Joe Colquitt, Kansas State defensive end, New England picked John Tarver, Colorado running back, and Kansas City plucked Dean Carlson, Iowa State quarterback.

Rebels Gun Down Jays

ESSEX — Spewing, sputtering and then unleashing a devastating attack, the fabuleous Richland high school Rebel basketball team stormed to their 21st win of the season against no defeats Tuesday night and held up to their stiffest test of the campaign in disposing of class L power, Charleston, 79-68.

Coach Larry Joplin's cagers took care of the Bluejay visitors with a big 25 point offensive explosion in the fourth quarter after CHS had led since late in the first period.

John Sims and Norman Cole teamed for 40 points, ripping in 23 and 17 respectively, to head up the RHS offense which got 14 big markers from reserve Rodney Keller.

Charleston jumped out to a 21-19 lead in the first period and opened up an nine point buldge in the second quarter before the Rebs closed to six, 41-35 at half. Richland trimmed three points off that margin with a 19-16 third quarter advantage before kicking its offense into high gear and running up a 25-11 advantage through the final eight minutes of action.

Richland built its 11 point verdict at the free throw line late in the game as Charleston went for the ball in hopes of closing the lead after the Rebs took the advantage midway in the period.

Alvin Pierce scored 17 points to head up coach Lucian Black's offense which included five players in double figures. Albri Cassell and Dan Smith scored 11 each while Larry Lawrence and Mike Gordon added 10 each.

Charleston shellacked the Rebels last season 105-60. Richland went undefeated after that point until the quarterfinals of the state Class M tournament when Fredericktown edged the Rebs and went on to place second in the state event.

Backs Top Pick

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Running backs were the first choices of the St. Louis Cardinals and the Kansas City Chiefs in professional football's annual draft of senior collegians Tuesday.

The Cards, picking fourth, took Oregon's Bobby Moore, a 6-foot-2, 212-pounder, regarded by many scouts as the best running prospect available this year. Club sources say Moore probably has a better chance as a wide receiver.

The Chiefs selected Jeff Kinney, holder of Nebraska's rushing records. "We feel extremely fortunate," said Kansas City Coach Hank Stram of Kinney's availability so late in the round.

Because of trades the Chiefs didn't get another turn until the fourth round when they took Andy Hamilton, a wide receiver from Louisiana State. "We were very lucky he was available," a club spokesman said.

In the ensuing rounds Kansas City gave the nod to Milt Davis, University of Texas defensive end, John Kahler, Long Beach State defensive end, and Dean Carlson, Iowa State quarterback.

St. Louis chose Conrad Dobler, Wyoming guard, Don Heater, Montana Tech running back, and Council Rudolph, Kentucky State defensive end.

Steelers Select MU Star

"Lincoln won't be big enough to hold me tonight," said Nebraska quarterback Jerry Tagge after learning the Green Bay Packers, his hometown team, made him their No. 1 draft choice in professional football's annual draft Tuesday.

Tagge was one of three members of the Cornhuskers, the nation's top college team, to go in the first round. All received the word of their selection while in Washington visiting President Nixon at the White House.

Tagge said playing with the Packers was his dream "since I was a little boy" and told of how he sold popcorn and hot dogs at the Packers' stadium when he was younger.

Other Cornhuskers to go on the first round were Jeff Kinney, a running back picked by Kansas City, and Larry Jacobson, a defensive lineman spoken for by the New York Giants.

Herb Orvis, a defensive lineman from Colorado, also went in the opening round when he was selected by Detroit.

Jack Mildren, Oklahoma quarterback, was the secondround choice of Baltimore, which said the Sooner ace would be given a chance at defensive back.

In the fourth round Pittsburgh tabbed Lorenzo Brinkley, Missouri defensive back, and Oakland chose Cliff Branch, Colorado wide receiver.

Fifth-round selections included Bill Butler, Kansas running back, by New Orleans on a trade with the Packers, and Carl Johnson, Cornhusker tackle, also by New Orleans.

The play-for-pay teams bypassed the conference in the sixth round but four Big Eight players received the nod in the seventh round, the final of the day.

Cincinnati took Steve Conley, Kansas running back, Pittsburgh selected Joe Colquitt, Kansas State defensive end, New England picked John Tarver, Colorado running back, and Kansas City plucked Dean Carlson, Iowa State quarterback.

SHS Loses Seventh Straight

JACKSON -- The Jackson Indians handed the Sikeston Bulldogs their seventh straight defeat Tuesday night, beating Sikeston 71-52 in a SEMO conference game.

Coach N. P. McDaniel went with an all underclassmen lineup with sophomore Ron Marks and Mark Couch at guards and juniors Pope Hunt and Alfred Redd along with sophomore Jim Saulters on the front line.

Jackson's veteran ballclub quickly jumped out to a 10-2 lead over the Bulldogs and upped that to 25-8 at the end of the first quarter. Late in the first quarter, Couch and Saulters left the lineup and seniors Tom Dawson and Bob Blankenship came in.

Sikeston stayed even with Jackson in the second quarter, trailing 37-20 at the half, and in the third quarter, sparked by Blankenship's rebounding and defense and the scoring of Hunt and Dawson, rallied and trimmed a 20 poin Jackson lead to 11 points but by the end of the quarter fell behind 52-37 and just played out the fourth with both clubs subbing heavily. Turnovers, inconsistant rebounding and a lack of scoring from all but Hunt, put the Bulldogs behind early and their third quarter rally faltered when they again hit a cold shooting spell.

Jackson dominated the first and fourth quarters and played the Bulldogs even through the middle of the contest.

Jackson ran and drove on the Bulldogs throughout the evening, using a devastating fast break to dump the SHS cagers.

Sam Sides scored 20 in leading the Indians offense, which included two other players in double figures.

Coach Larry Nickols Bulldogs JV unit teamed behind the scoring of Wyse's 16 points in beating the Indians in the night's opener. Bollinger scored 12 for the host.

Sikeston travels to Dexter Friday night.

Braves Tough

MORLEY — Scott County Central used the defense of Mike Mills and Fred Rowe's offensive talent to make easy work of Oran Tuesday night and claim a share of the Scott Mississippi conference championship, 96-75.

Mills held the Eagles high scoring Otis Burley to nine points and about that many rebounds while Rowe paced coach Ron Cookson's Braves offense with 31 points.

The Braves unleased an unbelievable second half offensive attack that left the Eagles without any hopes of a win after the third quarter.

Oran opened the contest with a 24-18 first quarter lead and gave the winners of the Scott- Mississippi conference tournament a scare before the Braves installed their defense and chipped three points off that margin with a 13-10 second quarter advantage.

In the third quarter the Braves got a hot hand and ran up 30 points on the scoreboard while Oran was getting 22 to take a 61-56 lead. SCCHS burned the nets for 35 points in the fourth quarter to Oran's 19 for the runaway win.

SHS Loses Seventh Straight

JACKSON -- The Jackson Indians handed the Sikeston Bulldogs their seventh straight defeat Tuesday night, beating Sikeston 71-52 in a SEMO conference game.

Coach N. P. McDaniel went with an all underclassmen lineup with sophomore Ron Marks and Mark Couch at guards and juniors Pope Hunt and Alfred Redd along with sophomore Jim Saulters on the front line.

Jackson's veteran ballclub quickly jumped out to a 10-2 lead over the Bulldogs and upped that to 25-8 at the end of the first quarter. Late in the first quarter, Couch and Saulters left the lineup and seniors Tom Dawson and Bob Blankenship came in.

Sikeston stayed even with Jackson in the second quarter, trailing 37-20 at the half, and in the third quarter, sparked by Blankenship's rebounding and defense and the scoring of Hunt and Dawson, rallied and trimmed a 20 poin Jackson lead to 11 points but by the end of the quarter fell behind 52-37 and just played out the fourth with both clubs subbing heavily. Turnovers, inconsistant rebounding and a lack of scoring from all but Hunt, put the Bulldogs behind early and their third quarter rally faltered when they again hit a cold shooting spell.

Jackson dominated the first and fourth quarters and played the Bulldogs even through the middle of the contest.

Jackson ran and drove on the Bulldogs throughout the evening, using a devastating fast break to dump the SHS cagers.

Sam Sides scored 20 in leading the Indians offense, which included two other players in double figures.

Coach Larry Nickols Bulldogs JV unit teamed behind the scoring of Wyse's 16 points in beating the Indians in the night's opener. Bollinger scored 12 for the host.

Sikeston travels to Dexter Friday night.

Before You Buy

by Margaret Dana

When you buy gasoline for your car, what octane do you select and why?

If you don't happen to be the gasoline buyer for your family, you may think these questions are out of your field of interest. But everyone in a family ought to be concerned, because you can save -- or lose -- $40-$50 a year or more, depending on whether you buy the right octane for your particular car. The same applies if you assume that "premium" gas is best regardless of the make, model or year of your car.

Recent figures produced at a Federal Trade Commission hearing on whether octane ratings should be placed plainly on all gas station pumps showed that low income families are hurt the most by not knowing which octane is right for the individual car. Consequently they spend far more than necessary to get "the best."

Transportation by car is often a large and important factor in holding a job. The president of Sun Oil Co. said at one the hearings that those earning less than $3,000 annually spend an average of 6.2 cents out of every dollar for gas. Often they, like those in higher income brackets, are spending more than they need to get good engine operation, and it hurts the lower income family most.

There are other factors involved, of course, in getting good service from a gasoline than just its octane rating. Climate, engine maintenance, and geography can help or alter its performance. In one part of the country you may run into exactly the same gasoline which you used at home, but it will have a different octane rating there. The needs of the atmosphere cause the difference.

Ever since the big horsepower race began in new cars, octane ratings have become almost the only big point the average consumer buyer recognizes as affecting engine performance. The result has been a general assumption that the higher octanes, or premium gasolines, are necessarily better than the regular types.

Exactly what does that term "octane" mean? It is a measure that engineers use to find out how smoothly the gasoline makes the engine work. Professor Phillip S. Myers of the University of Wisconsin, and national president of the Society of Automotive Engineers, explained the problem very lucidly at one of the FTC hearings on octane labeling.

Contrary to what most people think, the engine of a car should not run on a series of tiny explosions but rather on a smooth, flowing power from flame passing through the combustion chamber. When there are "pings" or "knocks," the engine is not running efficiently, and those "knocks" can actually damage the engine.

The cure may be to get the right octane gas for that engine. Octane ratings tell differences in the ability of a gasoline to prevent "knocks." But not all cars need HIGH or premium octanes.

How can the consumer tell which one to buy when almost no gasoline pump displays the figures telling its octane level? This is what the new FTC rule is designed to correct. Beginning March 15, 1972, all gasoline pumps at gas stations must let you see plainly what the octane number is. This will help make your gas money go further -- if you can get the manufacturer of your present car, or of a new car you may be buying this spring, to tell you in black and white what octane level gas that car is manufactured to use efficiently.

If your experience shows you can't get this information easily, it's possible the next FTC step will be to require that manufacturers include this urgently - needed fact in the car's literature, and possibly advertising.

One more point is important to understand. There are three ways in which octane ratings are measured -- the Research method, the Motor method (both are done in the laboratory), and the Road method, which is a way of showing actual road performance of a car. These three tests can be very different in results.

Some experts swear by one, some by another. But after much discussion, intensive study and many hearings, the FTC finds that a majority of experts and informed mechanics believe that by adding together the figures for the octane rating of the two laboratory tests, and dividing them by two, you get an AVERAGED laboratory test which represents road performance.

So when you see an octane rating of perhaps 91, 97, or 100, you can feel it reflects reliably the real octane performance/ after March 15.

? Consumer's Question Box ? By Margaret Dana

Q: Have you any figures showing how costs of living have gone up during the last 10 years or so, up to the Price Freeze last August. I know food has gone way up, but what about other things in relation to incomes?

A: According to government statistics, the price of food bought for use in our homes went up 33 per cent between 1959 and 1971. Services of all types averaged 65 per cent more in that period. Transportation cost 39 per cent more in 1971 than 1959 -- the base period. Medical care rose 78 per cent, commodities other than food went up 28 per cent. But it may surprise you to learn that the average income per person, for that same period ROSE 82 PER CENT. That doesn't mean everyone, but the AVERAGE.

Q: I would like to know the dangers, if any, of using electric bed blankets. I hear they are quite unsafe. Can you provide any facts?

A: For an electric blanket to be safe you must start with a reliable manufacturer who provides a guarantee, and the blanket should have a label showing that it has been tested for safety by UL, which is a nonprofit organization with just one job-- testing for public safety.

Then the blanket must be used exactly as the manufacturer directs on the label. It must not be folded, or have heavy things placed on it. Children must not be allowed to play on it -- wires and connection can be broken.

The unsafe blanket may be the one with no labeling, no responsibility of the maker, and no guarantee.

Q: I am buying a new pair of tires for my car and wonder if you have any information as to whether you get the best service from putting them on the front or the back wheels.

A: According to the Tire Industry Safety Council, newer tires should be placed on the rear wheels. A good deal of intensive research has been done to find out where the car owner gets the best deal in placing new tires, and the studies show that vehicles in accidents more often show they have their WORN tires in the rear. So new tires with the best tread should be on the rear -- not the front -- to help hold the road.

Q: I am a working woman and I would like to know if you can tell us what states, if any, have minimum wage laws covering those of us who do domestic work in homes -- like cleaning or cooking.

A: New York State has a new minimum wage law extending the coverage of $1.85 per hour minimum to private household workers. Massachusetts and Wisconsin are the only other states with effective coverage for working women doing domestic jobs.

Q: I keep hearing that fats in our diets cause heart disease. Has this been actually proved or is it just guesswork?

A: This debate still goes on. However, the most important reference used to prove the connection between fats in the diet and heart disease -- the Framingham Diet Study Group -- issued in 1970 another report which said, "With one exception there was no discernible association between reported diet intake and serum cholesterol levels, in the Framingham Diet Study Group."

The theory offered in recent years has been that if the nation switched to polyunsaturated fats and cut down on even these, heart disease might be prevented.

What nutrition scientist and medical experts are now saying is simply that we do not know enough about this problem to make sweeping changes in diet. They recommend a balanced diet of a wide variety of foods at a calorie level which will maintain ideal weight -- rather than eliminating any one type of food.

Wyoming is nicknamed the "Equality State" because it gave women the right to vote in 1869, one year after it was organized as a territory and 51 years before women could vote generally in the United States.

Investment Adviser Retains Faith In Mutual Funds

NEW YORK (AP) — Only three of every 10 investors should buy and sell shares in American industry directly instead of through an intermediary, such as a mutual fund, says investment adviser Tom Martin.

The first investor is the one who enjoys and is good at picking stocks. The second enjoys following the market as a hobby or avocation. The third "has a damn good source of information."

Martin may be biased, because he is executive vice president of Anchor Corp., which serves as investment adviser for mutual funds having assets of close to $2 billion. He also is a man of unusual candor.

In Martin's view, the mutual fund industry is slowly emerging from a period of agonizing reappraisal of its goals and procedures after running off the track during the 1960s.

Those were the dramatic years of "performance." As happens from time to time, people develop the notion that fortunes are made easily in stocks. Many factors contributed, but the mutual funds certainly did their share.

"We lost sight of our goals," said Martin, explaining how some funds permitted the investing public to use them as vehicles for short-term trading instead of long-term investing.

"Funds were not meant for short-term gains," he said, "but some funds participated in the game. They did nothing to prevent it."

The news media is guilty also. The performance records of glamor funds were widely acclaimed, and the insinuation was that they could repeat their short-term gains year after year. They couldn't.

In fact, as too often happens, the peak of publicity about some of the glamor funds coincided with their peak accomplishments. Millions of dollars thereafter poured into funds whose only direction was down.

Following the performance disaster came more bad months from 1968 to 1970, when many funds turned in mediocre records, mainly because they didn't foresee the extent and duration of economic problems.

The public reacted by slowing their purchase and raising their redemptions. Many mutual funds investors switched to corporate or U.S. Savings Bonds and some simply put their cash back in the bank.

"Now," said Martin, "we must regain the confidence of the public and regain that market—and it is our market."

He sees mutual funds as competing for the savings dollar— the same money that goes into the banks—as much as for investment dollars. And to prove it deserves this money, he claims the funds now place a great deal more emphasis on long-term consistency and stability.

In order to achieve goals, many funds, including those in the Anchor Group, are originating their own research rather than trusting to that of the brokers, which Martin claims is deteriorating in quality.

In his view, now is the time for financially oriented stocks, such as banks and insurance companies.

Twine used to bale hay in the United States and Canada in a recent year would stretch to the moon 72 times.

Random Leftovers

JOHN GOULD
in the
Christian Science
Monitor
Lisbon Falls, Maine

A few odd and random notes seem to be left over, and I can't think of anything to do with them, namely:

A professor on Educational Television said, "We must be careful not to overly, and without due respect for the numerous other varied interests of the community as a whole, emphasize this special need." Soon thereafter, on a station break, the announcer appealed to me to, if I wished to support the laudable public services of ETV, and would respond with alacrity so they might award me a bonus of a free cook book by Julia Child (but which did not appeal to me because Mrs. Child had lately been on the channel to tell me I could easily detect a bad hard-boiled egg by the smell), send $25.

Humor (says another note) often works out somewhat like the little jest of Howie Massells, our enterprising Main Street hardware merchant, who, on a morning that was minus-35 degrees (F.), dressed his show- window with mosquito repellents, but the glass was so frosted nobody could see in.

Three times this past winter snow stayed our mailman from the swift completion of his appointed rounds.

The other evening on his network show, David Brinkley said, "... the crowd rose to its feet and gave him a standing ovation." There seems to come to mind a Roman general who was much put out at the time because he returned in expectation of tumultuous enthusiasm, but the Senate granted him only an ovation. Since the ovation was a lesser celebration bestowed when the circumstances were more obvious than spectacular, it was not much of an honor in this instance. Thus a "standing ovation" for a ball player who clouts a home run may be sufficient when you observe that his success was clearly anticipated by 30,000 people who came to the park to see him do it. Let us hope that some evening the erudite Mr. Brinkley tells us how a crowd rose to its feet and conducted a sitting ovation.

Sylvester Cox wants to get in touch with some congressman who will introduce hiss proposed amendment to the gun laws. The "Cox Amendment" will permit shooting snowmobiles with flintlock weapons.

Peabody Griswold, cultural affairs consultant for developing nations, has been home on leave from the State Department. He has set up a flagpole at his place on the River Road, but had to dig three holes before the job was completed. The first two weren't deep enough.

Johnny Dabolski tried to get a plumber through the Yellow Pages, and upon dialing the first five he got the same answering service five times. After he reached a plumber who agreed to come, Johnny fixed the pipe himself, so wanted to call back and tell him to never- mind. He says when he called the answering service to ask which plumber he had finally talked to, he got the answering service's answering service.

(When you make a toll call and do not reach the number you want, but have an unsatisfactory tilt with an answering service, you may wish to save the charges by calling the supervisory operator, who will be amenable to your contention that this was not exactly a "completed" call.)

A professor of ecological dentistry, at the Harvard School of Dental Medicine, protests that enforced fluoridation of public water supplies is "democratic procedure" becausy the order is subject to a post facto referendum petition. His contention seems to be that the public may repeal laws, but has no privilege to enact them unless he deems it advisable, which in this instance he does not. My note asks the question if his premise would seem sound were he not a Harvard professor, and were he talking about some other issue. (I find I did not set down an answer.)

The "media" has faithfully and repeatedly informed us for some time now that the Supreme court has granted 18-year- olds the right to vote for the president. I do not know just how the Supreme Court worded this decision, but I'm confident the justices have been misquoted — the constant repetition of the term "national elections" is hardly constitutional. But I think it would be fair now to grant this same privilege to us older folks, who have for years embraced the ballot without being allowed to vote for a president. (And you never have, unless you were a member of the Electoral College.)

Let us hope that some evening the erudite Mr. Brinkley tells us how a crowd rose to its feet and conducted a sitting ovation.

Sylvester Cox wants to get in touch with some congressman who will introduce hiss proposed amendment to the gun laws. The "Cox Amendment" will permit shooting snowmobiles with flintlock weapons.

Peabody Griswold, cultural affairs consultant for developing nations, has been home on leave from the State Department. He has set up a flagpole at his place on the River Road, but had to dig three holes before the job was completed. The first two weren't deep enough.

Johnny Dabolski tried to get a plumber through the Yellow Pages, and upon dialing the first five he got the same answering service five times. After he reached a plumber who agreed to come, Johnny fixed the pipe himself, so wanted to call back and tell him to never- mind. He says when he called the answering service to ask which plumber he had finally talked to, he got the answering service's answering service.

(When you make a toll call and do not reach the number you want, but have an unsatisfactory tilt with an answering service, you may wish to save the charges by calling the supervisory operator, who will be amenable to your contention that this was not exactly a "completed" call.)

A professor of ecological dentistry, at the Harvard School of Dental Medicine, protests that enforced fluoridation of public water supplies is "democratic procedure" becausy the order is subject to a post facto referendum petition. His contention seems to be that the public may repeal laws, but has no privilege to enact them unless he deems it advisable, which in this instance he does not. My note asks the question if his premise would seem sound were he not a Harvard professor, and were he talking about some other issue. (I find I did not set down an answer.)

The "media" has faithfully and repeatedly informed us for some time now that the Supreme court has granted 18-year- olds the right to vote for the president. I do not know just how the Supreme Court worded this decision, but I'm confident the justices have been misquoted — the constant repetition of the term "national elections" is hardly constitutional. But I think it would be fair now to grant this same privilege to us older folks, who have for years embraced the ballot without being allowed to vote for a president. (And you never have, unless you were a member of the Electoral College.)
